CIO Urges Fast Action On European Aid Program

U. S. Way of Life Is Threatened If We Fail, Marshall Tells Convention

Boston, Oct. 15 (AP).—The CIO tonight called for "prompt action" on European aid after hearing Secretary of State Marshall declare that such a move was urgent because the world faces "actual disappearance of the western civilization on which American living is based."

Top CIO leaders spoke in support of American foreign policy, without a single dissenter, and the convention unanimously favored aid which President Philip Murray said "would go beyond the Marshall Plan if necessary."

The two-hour discussion followed Marshall's declaration that food and coal are "immediate requirements for Europe."

Production Termed Basis

Marshall told the convention that "the basic problem of world recovery is production" and Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, followed that with his assertion that "the power of American economy must be geared to human needs."

Reuther asked, however, that labor be given a place "at the council tables in Washington . . . that labor be drawn into active participation in carrying out foreign policy."

The secretary told the national convention of the CIO that he was confident of American labor's "reaction to the efforts of the enemies of democracy . . . to disrupt the structure of our society in the domestic field."

[International News Service said the invitation to the Secretary to make the address had been widely interpreted as a rebuff by the CIO top leadership to leftwing elements within the organization.—Editor's Note.]

Murray Indorses Talk

The 600 CIO delegates and 1500 visitors and guests applauded that statement and again when he said:

"No section of the American population has a more vital stake in the preservation of free institutions in the world than has American labor."

After Marshall concluded reading his speech, he spoke briefly off the record, after calling upon all reporters present to "lay down your pencils."

CIO President Philip Murray said as Marshall left the hall that "I am quite sure what he has said reflects the opinions of the overwhelming multitude of Americans."

Condensed Text

A condensed text of the Secretary's address follows:

Everyone agrees, I think, that labor plays a vital part in the functioning of the modern state. If labor can be confused or embittered, if labor can be made to lose faith in the community of which it forms a part, then the core of any national society is threatened. The enemies of democracy know this; and it explains the efforts they make to undermine the confidence of the labor element in the stability of our institutions and the soundness of our traditions.

I am confident of American labor's reaction to efforts made to disrupt the structure of our society in the domestic field. But the problems of foreign relations are in their very nature remote from the American scene and are more easily distorted. For this reason I wish to outline certain of the fundamental considerations which I believe are important to an understanding of the American position today.

There is a danger that the individual man, whose well being is the chief concern of all democratic policies, foreign or domestic, is being lost sight of in the welter of ideological generalities and slogans which fill the air. Generalities are frequently accepted as gospel truth without even a superficial examination of the validity of their basic tenets. Often they

Yalta Talks Began on Rising Victory Tide

Speaking Frankly

HISTORIC MEETING—This was the scene as, seated around the conference table in the palace at Yalta, Russia, in 1945, President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill discussed plans for a rapid peace and postwar security. Details of the historic meeting are told in James F. Byrnes' book, "Speaking Frankly"

German Situation Took Spotlight

By James F. Byrnes

This is a serialization of James F. Byrnes' "Speaking Frankly"—six of 15 chapters of the book published October 15, 1947, by Harper & Brothers. Copyright, 1947, by James F. Byrnes Foundation (A Charitable Trust).

THE Yalta Conference opened on Sunday, February 4, 1945, on a rising tide of Allied victories. The German counteroffensive in the west had been stopped in the bloody snow of the Ardennes Forest and we were preparing to launch our drive across the Rhine. The Russians had begun the drive on Germany's eastern frontier that was to end in Berlin three months later. The situation we such that at one time President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin had engaged in light banter as to whether they should wager that the P Army would get to Berlin before the American Army recaptured Manila.

Our chief objective for the conference was to secure agreement on the Dumbarton Oaks proposals for the creation of an international peace organizatic But the rapid advance of our armies required also that urgent consideration be given to European political and military problems. It was natural, then, that the President, with the agreement of the other members opened the conference with the suggestion to discuss "what we shall do with Germany."

Stalin immediately made it clear that he wanted to discuss the terms of the German surrender, the future form of the German state or states, reparations, and the allocation of a zone of occupation to France.

In the fall of 1944 the Soviet Union and the Provisional Government of France had entered into a treaty of friendship. It was immediately obvious at Yalta, however, that the treaty and the friendly words exchanged over it by the diplomats had not changed in any degree Marshal Stalin's opinion on the contribution of France to the war. He thought France should play little part in the control of Germany, and stated that Yugoslavia and Poland were more entitled to consideration than France.

WHEN Roosevelt and Churchill proposed that France be allotted a zone of occupation, Stalin agreed. But it was clear he agreed only because the French zone was to be taken out of the territory allotted to the United States and the United Kingdom. And he especially opposed giving France a representative on the Allied Control Council for Germany. He undoubtedly concurred in the opinion expressed to the President by Mr. Molotov that this should be done "only as a kindness to France and not because she is entitled to it."

"I am in favor of France being given a zone," Stalin declared, "but I cannot forget that in this war France opened the gates to the enemy." He maintained it would create difficulties to give France a zone of occupation and a representative on the Allied Control Council and refuse the same treatment to others who had fought more than France. He said France would soon demand that De Gaulle attend the Big Threes Conferences.

Churchill argued strongly in favor of France's being represented on the Council. He said the British public would not understand if questions affecting France and the French zone were settled without

Hay Makes Mare Go, Conferees Reminded

"If our treatment of Germany's internal economy is such as to leave 80 million people virtually starving, are we to sit still and say, 'It serves you right,' or will we be required to keep them alive? If so, who is going to pay for that? If you have a horse and you want him to pull the wagon you have to provide him with a certain amount of corn—or at least hay."—Churchill at Yalta.

Audit Shows Fund Misuse In Precinct 4

Collections Were Held Up 28 Times To Hide Shortages, Auditor Reports

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Public welfare funds collected at the Fourth Police Precinct were withheld from Juvenile Court 28 times to conceal shortages, a District Auditor's report revealed yesterday.

Also disclosed were four instances of the disappearance of money and property taken from prisoners. The report said the money and property "were misappropriated by someone at the Fourth Precinct."

District Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton in a report to the Commissioners recommended sweeping changes in handling funds and property in all police precincts. He has previously announced an examination of the financial records of all police stations will be made.

The shortages were revealed after a three-week examination of the precinct's books under the direction of Bernard A. Harrison, chief investigator of the auditor's office.

The funds represented money collected in the Fourth Precinct under court orders from husbands for the support of wives and minor children. The investigation was for the period from July 1 to October 2.

Barrett Promises Action

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, promised to "take whatever action is necessary to see that there is no recurrence of the situation." He said this included "disciplinary action against whoever is responsible, if necessary."

Capt. Benjamin Keuhling in charge of the Fourth Precinct, said he had no comment to make.

"I have not yet turned in my complete report," he said, "and when I do I will let Major Barrett speak for me."

A meeting between Pilkerton, Barrett and District Commissioner John Russell Young is scheduled for 10 a. m. today.

The Washington Post disclosed September 27 that a collection had been made among men at the Fourth Precinct to remedy a shortage in welfare funds collected at the precinct for Juvenile Court and that the District auditor had ordered a full-scale check of all precinct financial records.

At the same time it was revealed that Pvt. Oscar L. Fisher, Fourth Precinct Station clerk, was delinquent in turning in dues collections to three police benefit associations when he committed suicide September 18.

Private Audit Being Made

The auditor's report released yesterday did not cover association funds. A private audit is being made of these accounts by the associations.

Subsequently it was disclosed in The Washington Post that the precinct collection of $145.70 was for money that had not been turned in for the dates of August 23 and 24. Yesterday's report showed the cash for these two dates was not turned in until September 5.

The report also showed a shortage of $157 and a missing watch and strap which belonged to four prisoners. The cash and watch should have been turned over to the police property clerk as evidence or returned to their rightful owners.

The report said the money and property which "disappeared" belonged to James Green, 811 Delaware ave. sw., defendant, $10 in quarters; James Melvin Hickman, jr., wallet containing $125; Robert Longs, $22; Acey Carter, Bulova watch and strap, estimated value $5.

In none of these instances, the report said, is there a record of this money or property having been deposited with the chief clerk or having been returned to their owners.

The auditors described as fol-

Funds in Sight For Stopgap Aid, Experts Believe

Survey Indicates Enough Cash for Europe Without Special Session

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Government financial experts now believe that western Europe can be given winter aid without the necessity of a special session of Congress.

They believe that dollars can be found to keep France and Italy and others supplied with American feed and fuel until Congress has a chance to act in the regular session starting January 3.

Heretofore, it has been understood that there was only enough money in sight to keep hard-pressed European countries going until December 1.

Based Upon Survey

Government financial experts, it was learned on good authority, concluded that they could find the dollars to take care of Europe's distressed countries beyond December 1 after making a survey of Government balances, relief funds and other possible money sources.

The question of a special session of Congress has been the subject of an angry controversy. President Truman has been sharply criticized for not calling one. Two days ago, Harold E. Stassen said that a special session was "imperative," and he added that "We have been dallying in the face of disaster."

It is not only Mr. Truman who is hopeful of avoiding a special session. Influential Republicans on the Hill, friends of the Marshall Plan, share his feelings. They believe that a special session might result in a debate on far more than stopgap aid and jeopardize the chances of the long-range Marshall Plan.

Various Sources Found

Just where the Govern... financial authorities are to ... the dollars needed to carry Eu... beyond December 1 remains to be seen. Gradually, however, var... sources and methods are being discovered.

President Truman yesterday announced that another 50 million dollars had been made available to France to buy food and fuel.

Mr. Truman explained in a White House statement that more than 80 million dollars still is owed to France by the United States on account of procurement obligations incurred by the American Army in France and in French North Africa. An auditing of the records is now going on so that a settlement can be made.

In the meantime, Mr. Truman said, the Army has been authorized to purchase from the French government the equivalent of 50 million dollars in francs, the money to be used to pay for French purchases in the United States.

Hear Cause Argued

A group of 17 Republican and Democratic members of Congress visited the State Department yesterday and heard Administration arguments for emergency relief for Europe and for the long-range Marshall Plan.

The law-makers declined to talk about the conference afterward.

Undersecretary of State Lovett, at an earlier news conference, said that the United States was doing its utmost to provide Europe with emergency aid. He listed some of the things that had been done and which might be done to provide Europe with dollars:

1. Use of 93 million dollars of an Export-Import Bank reconstruction loan to France to permit France to buy coal and other raw materials.

2. Early return of about 165 million dollars in gold stolen by the Germans and still held by Allied authorities, most of which would go to France. (The United States recently returned 28 million dollars of the gold hoard to Italy.)

3. A possibility that the Commodity Credit Corporation may find some loophole in its law making emergency aid possible. France hopes for 50 million dollars from this source.

Army to Act In Walkout, Paris Says

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP).—France's strike wave grew more threatening today and the government was reported preparing "drastic measures," including operation of the Paris subway system by troops, in order to break the capital's transport tie-up.

While millions of footsore Parisians walked to and from work, the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor called on "the entire working class" throughout France to "actively support" the strike of subway and bus workers in the capital.

The French merchant seamen's union announced 36,000 sailors, officers and shore workers would walk out tomorrow and tie up French and African ports. The union was to continue negotiations, however.

Supporting Socialist Premier Paul Ramadier, who yesterday called the strike "political," the newspaper L'Aube, organ of Foreign Minister George Bidault's Popular Republican movement, declared the walkout was part of a new "cominform style" strategy. "Cominform" is an abbreviation for the new International Communist Information Bureau recently ordered established in Yugoslavia.

Charges were hurled that the Communists were trying with

Wheat Soars As Traders Ignore Drive

December Futures Touch $3 Despite Margin Increase

By John Ball
Post Reporter

Wheat traders ignored all Government efforts to hold down grain prices yesterday, including the drive by President Truman's Citizens Food Committee to cut down grain consumption.

December wheat soared to $3 shortly after noon, for the third time in the history of futures trading at the Chicago Board of Trade. It then reacted slightly, to close at $2.98¾ to $2.99¼—as much as 3½ cents a bushel above Tuesday's close.

It was the seventh straight day that Decmeber wheat has advanced since margins were doubled by the grain exchanges at the virtual order of President Truman. The margins were raised to one third the amount involved in each transaction, a figure definitely expected by Government officials to put a brake on the runaway market.

Exceed $3 in March

The last time futures in wheat went above $3 was last March, when March futures hit $3.05. But like yesterday, they fell back that day to below $3.

The previous high was reached in 1917, when May futures went to $3.25 a bushel, still the all-time high.

Traders attributed the sharp rise to steady buying of cash wheat by the Commodity Credit Corp.—the Government agency that buys for export. Dry weather in the Southwestern winter wheat belt, delaying seeding and seriously threatening next year's crop, also was an important factor.

Cash wheat sold in Kansas City for $3.25, the highest in 27 years. The all-time high was May 14, 1917, when it sold for $3.42.

The Canadian Wheat Board announced a new all-time high of

AFL Avoids Public Worker Strike Stand

$3,000,000 Political Fund Voted to Use In 1948 Election

San Francisco, Oct. 15 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor refused to commit itself today on the touchy question of the right to strike by public employes, limiting itself to an indorsement of the Government worker's "legitimate and fundamental rights."

At the same time, the AFL authorized an increase in member assessments to raise approximately three million dollars for an educational and public relations campaign in the 1948 election year, and for the defeat of the Taft-Hartley law and its congressional enacters.

The federation sidestepped specific indorsement of the strike rights of public employes after a move was made from the floor to amend the federation's position as reported by the legislative committee.

Arnold S. Zander of Madison, Wis., president of the State, County and Municipal Employes Union, obtained from the committee spokesman an interpretation of the report which would in principle support the strike right, but not specifically define it.

Zander said there was no desire on the part of public employes to strike in any case, but that they wanted the AFL to take a position whereby governmental authorities would adopt a more favorable attitude "making it unnecessary to strike."

Frank X. Martell, secretary of the Detroit Building Trades Council, then offered an amendment to the committee's report opposing

All 69 Passengers On Flying Boat Down At Sea Are Safe

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Coast Guard Cutter Bibb today rescued 18 persons who spent a hazardous night on a crippled flying boat in the North Atlantic and then headed for port with all 69 of the plane's survivors safe aboard.

The Bibb, whose crew had worked under adverse weather conditions for nearly 24 hours in removing the men, women and children from the distressed transatlantic plane, pointed her bow for Boston, 1605 miles away from the crash scene.

The Bibb's skipper, Capt. Paul B. Cronk, and his strong-nerved crew brought 17 men and one woman to safety at dawn to complete the rescue of 62 passengers and seven crewmen of the big flying boat which crash-landed near the cutter yesterday when fuel ran low.

Captain Cronk said he expected to arrive in Boston at 10 a. m. (EST) Sunday. The plane, the Bermuda Sky Queen, was ditched about 820 miles east of Argentia, Nfld., on a westward flight from Ireland.

Except for shock and exposure the rescued were none the worse for their perilously close call with death, the skipper reported.

Before leaving the scene were skillful seamanship and great daring effected the rescue, the Bibb sighted her guns on the Sky Queen, owned by American International Airways—a charter service—and sunk the plane, removing her as a menace to navigation.

Shell-Dodging Congressmen Are Stranded

Athens, Oct. 15 (AP).—Representatives Olin Teague (D., Tex.) and Donald Jackson (R., Calif.), who were fired upon by guerillas two days ago near the junction of the Greek, Bulgarian and Yugoslav borders, now are stranded in a village near the Bulgarian frontier 30 miles north of Alexandroupolis because of destruction of two bridges.

A U. S. embassy spokesman said two light Greek army planes which attempted to bring the touring Congressmen back to Athens were unable to land near the village and had to turn back.

322 Greek Guerillas Lay Down Their Arms

Athens, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Press dispatches from Salonika reported that 322 guerillas laid down their arms today in the largest mass surrender since the government issued its amnesty order last month.

At the same time, the Greek army reported surrounding large guerilla bands in central Greece and claimed to have killed 54 and wounded more than 100.

These reports followed a press conference last night in which Dwight Griswold, head of the American aid mission, predicted the government would "greatly reduce" guerilla opposition by next June.

Truman Drives To Hospital To See His Valet

President Truman drove to the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md., yesterday to visit Arthur Prettyman, his Negro valet who is ill of pneumonia there.

Long a familiar figure around the White House, Prettyman was valet to the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt as well as to President Truman. He holds the rank of chief Navy steward, retired. He went on the retired list recently after 30 years in the Navy.

Prettyman entered the hospital last Thursday. The White House said that he was improving yesterday afternoon.

A neighbor recently handed Zillmer a bag, assuring him it contained the skunk which had escaped. The neighbor was half right. Occupant of the bag, undeniably a skunk, was the wrong one.

5 More Back U. N. Miniature Assembly Plan

Both Friend and Foe See Aim as Breaking Council Stalemates

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 15 (AP).—Five more nations today supported a year-round 57-nation "Little Assembly" as a means of averting paralysis of the United Nations by Soviet vetoes.

Despite American denials that the proposal was designed to get around the veto, friend and foe alike saw it aimed toward breaking the stalemate in the 11-nation Security Council.

"I really cannot resist the temptation to admit clearly and candidly," said Turkey's Selim Sarper, "that in fact we are trying to circumvent, not the Security Council, but its inability to accomplish its primary function, chained as it is to its present voting procedure."

Opposed Only by Soviet Bloc

This statement before the Assembly's Political Committee was typical of the less outspoken but unmistakable beliefs expressed by El Salvador, Belgium, Uruguay and China. As was expected, Soviet bloc opponents of the proposal based their objections today on the same assumption.

At the end of the second day's debate on the American plan, officially labeled as a proposal for an "interim committee" of the Assembly, nobody had opposed it except the Soviet bloc.

Yugoslavia's Ambassador to Moscow, Bladimir Popovic, argued that the United States had made its proposal simply because the "Americans did not like the path so far taken by the Security Council. Dr. Juraj Slavik of Czechoslovakia, Ambassador to the United States, agreed.

Would Provide Two Courts

Dr. Hector David Castro of El Salvador, Ambassador to the United States, declared creation of the committee would "make the General Assembly a more efficient voice."

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo of China, also Ambassador to Washington, favored the proposal, but said he would support Australia's request that a subcommittee be set up to examine the American proposal.

As seen by many delegates after today's meeting, the American pro-

'Outside' Experts Act

Advisory Committee to Start Revamping Taxes Next Week

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A 10-man tax advisory committee will meet in Washington next week to start spelling out far-reaching recommendations to guide Congress in revamping the Federal tax structure.

The group of "outside" tax experts, headed by Roswell Magill, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, is considering a wide range of changes running all the way from the Canadian form of transactions tax to eliminating double taxes on dividends.

Authority for husbands and wives in all States to split income for Federal tax purposes also is high up on an agenda aimed chiefly at removing so-called "inequities" in the present tax law, and providing incentives for venture capital.

The group, named last summer by House Ways and Means Chairman Harold Knutson (R., Minn.) to advise his committee on a new over-all tax revision bill, apart from the twice-vetoed Knutson tax reduction measure, has reduced some of its proposals to tentative form.

Final votes will be taken next Tuesday and a report readied for Knutson's committee by November. Knutson is returning to Washington this week-end to sit in on the meeting. The Ways and Means Committee, meanwhile, has scheduled hearings November 4 on one of the hottest subjects put up to the advisory group: Taxation of the profits of cooperatives, labor

Mighty U. S. Air Power Urged By Rickenbacker to Avert War

By the United Press

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker said last night that the United States must build the world's mightiest air power, and quickly, if it hopes to head off war with Russia.

The World War I flying ace, who now is president of Eastern Air Lines, told a Washington Board of Trade meeting that air power alone can stop Russia's graniose scheme for world rule.

"The mathematics of survival are very simple," he said. "It is brain power, plus man power, plus air power—equals peace power."

Rickenbacker likened Russia's war plans to a "crimson cyclone" which, like the hurricanes of nature, can strike with unexpected fury and without too much warning.

"I fail to understand," he added, "why the habit of complacency has blinded us, as a Nation, so we fail to see the storm signals flying, not from Corpus Christi to Cape Cod, but from the Baltic to the Balkans, from Siberia to Singapore.

"Storm signals of a world-wide holocaust, warnings of impending havoc are as clear as an eight-column headline, as loud as a radio alarm, as terrifying as the ancient handwriting on the wall."

He said Americans were "lulling themselves into believing that we are living in a wonderland house" that could withstand the onslaught. But that it actually "would collapse like a house of cards."

"We have alien termites in the cellar," he said. "We have cracks in our walls of defense, broken shutters of disunity before our

Byrnes Memoirs Stir Enthusiasm

Even Wallace Lauds Russian Solution; Eaton, Connally, Krock, Lerner Comment

Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes' memoirs, running serially in The Washington Post, have been received in general with enthusiasm by newspapers, commentators, Government officials and members of Congress.

Even Henry A. Wallace, forced out of the Cabinet by Byrnes last year, applauded the author's solution for dealing with Soviet Russia.

Criticism of the book, "Speaking Frankly," came strangely enough from quarters which ordinarily have little in common. The Communist Daily Worker did not treat the work editorially, but headlined its story of the book, "Threaten USSR With A-Bomb, Says Byrnes." It published a picture of the author captioned "Warmonger."

The Washington Times-Herald dismissed the memoirs in a five-paragraph editorial headed, "Oh, Shut Up!" in which it said "we would thank Byrnes and the rest of the Roosevelt gang to just shut up."

Patterson Papers at Odds

"We should think," the Times-Herald concluded, "that Byrnes would be the last man on earth to offer an opinion on what the United States ought to do about Russia, considering the dismal flops to date in which he has had a master hand."

The New York Daily News, on the other hand, dedicated its entire editorial space to lauding the book as "the most sensational package of memoirs yet to spring from the late war." The Daily News finds in Byrnes' book support of its own estimate of the late President Roosevelt who "previously had agreed to many of the shenanigans Russia has been pulling off in central Europe since the war."

"Who beefed up Russia to its present state of pride, power and imperialist zingo?" the Daily News asks. It answers for itself: "The Byrnes book adds further evidence, and extremely weighty evidence, to the theory that the chief beefer-upper was none other than Franklin D. Roosevelt. Truly, a sensational volume."

Not Deep Enough for PM

The Baltimore Evening Sun finds "Speaking Frankly" an incomplete account but valuable as "a reasoned discussion of our foreign policy by a man . . . who has helped to interpret and act on it."

In a copyrighted story in PM, Max Lerner considers the book "frank but not deep" and sums it up as Byrnes' apologia for his own conduct and that of the United States itself in dealing with Russia. Lerner feels the most important revelation to be that Molotov and Hitler nearly reached an agreement as late as October, 1940, which might have made Russia an ally instead of an enemy of Germany.

In the New York Times, Arthur Krock writes that Byrnes "makes a number of sensational revelations in deceptively mild language".

The Times' book reviewer, Orville Prescott, considers the volume "unquestionably an important document" but "clumsily organized, chronologically confusing and indifferently written".

Former Secretary of Commerce Wallace, interviewed at Baltimore, said he felt Byrnes' plan for dealing with Russia would have the "net effect of peace and understanding with the Russians—I think it is definitely a program for peace."

Wallace Admits Charge

Queried later about Byrnes' statement that Wallace had destroyed the "bipartisan policy" by his speeches while Commerce Secretary, he said:

"That was probably what I was trying to do. It was a warmongering policy. I was doing all I could to oppose it."

Here in Washington, Democratic and Republican members of Congress united in applauding Byrnes' recommendations on how to deal with the USSR.

Chairman Eaton (R., N. J.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said the author had performed a public service of "the most vital importance." Representative Jarman (D., Ala.), a member of Eaton's committee, said the book would be "very valuable" in dealing with the Soviet.

Group Asks Truman to Meet Stalin

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—The National Council of American-Soviet Friendship today released a statement, signed by nearly 100 Americans, calling for an immediate meeting between President Truman and Premier Stalin.

"Now is the time—before our foreign policy becomes subject to the pressures of a fateful election campaign—for President Truman and Premier Stalin to meet," the statement said . . . "We believe that, in the light of the vast achievements resulting from our wartime coalition, there are no problems which cannot be settled now."

Among the signers listed were Rockwell Kent, Corliss Lamont, the Rev. William Howard Melish, chairman of the council; Raymond Swing and Vilhjalmar Stefansson. The statement pointed out that the signers do not affirm that every detail of the Soviet policy is correct, and said "we make this appeal because we believe America's own interests require long-range, peaceable co-existence with the Soviet Union."

Watson Is Still Seriously Ill; Davis Takes Walk

Condition of former Republican Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, ill in Garfield Hospital with an undisclosed ailment, yesterday was reported "essentially unchanged in the past 24 hours."

His physician, Dr. William S. Detwiler, said the former Republican leader had spent a fairly good night, but added that he is still "seriously ill."

Another former Republican Senator, James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, was reported to have walked for the first time yesterday since last month when he was taken to Washington Sanitarium with a kidney ailment.

Dr. Robert A. Hare said Davis spent a "comfortable night" and was "resting easily" yesterday.

posal, if enacted, would give nations with grievances roughly two courts to choose from. They could take a complaint to the Security Council, which in theory has means of enforcing its decision. But unless Russia favored their plea, the delegates said, a veto would be certain.

The second alternative would be to bring the plea before the interim committee, which would have no methods of enforcing decisions and could only present its recommendations to the General Assembly. In other words, they said, the committee would at least be valuable for airing a dispute.

[Other developments in the U. N., according to the Associated Press:

[1. An authoritive source disclosed Britain would emphasize tomorrow in her second declaration to the Assembly's special Palestine committee her intention of withdrawing completely from the Holy Land if the Assembly fails to reach a solution on which the Arabs and Jews can agree. This source said talks already were in progress between London and Jerusalem concerning the date of withdrawal. Lebanon renewed the Arab attack on the United States in a long speech to the committee while Yemen, in its first speech since becoming a member, upheld the Arab case in the Palestine issue.

[2. The United States and Britain charged in the 57-nation legal committee that Russia wanted them to force the return of some 400,000 voluntarily exiled citizens from the occupation zones in Germany. These charges came after Russia asked that the U. N. order a halt to recruiting of displaced persons for "forced labor" elsewhere.—Editor's note.]

Pardon Recommended For Slayer of Son

Boston, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The Massachusetts correction commissioner today recommended "a full and complete pardon" for socially prominent Attorney John F. Noxon, jr., of Pittsfield, who is serving a life sentence for the electrocution slaying of his infant imbecile son.

Commissioner J. Paul Doyle said he believed there was "at least a reasonable doubt" as to Noxon's guilt. Doyle said it was possible the child might have become entangled accidentally in the wires which electrocuted him.

Yalta Conference Opened On Rising Tide of Victory

her participation in the discussion. It did not follow, as Stalin had suggested, that France would demand De Gaulle's participation in the conferences of the Big Three, he added. And, in his best humor, Mr. Churchill said the conference was "a very exclusive club, the entrance fee being at least five million soldiers or the equivalent."

Stalin, however, feared there would be such a demand. He said General de Gaulle was "very unrealistic" and reiterated that even though France had not done much fighting in the war, yet De Gaulle has demanded equal rights with the Soviets, the British and the Americans who have done the fighting.

President Roosevelt did not take issue with Stalin on De Gaulle. The President had great admiration for France and its people, but he did not admire De Gaulle. On several occasions he referred to a conversation at Casablanca in which De Gaulle compared himself with Joan of Arc as the spiritual leader of France, and with Clemenceau as the political leader.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S first opinion was not to insist upon giving France representation on the Allied Council if she were allotted a zone. As the argument proceeded, however, the President said he wished to consider further that phase of the question and asked that action be delayed. The following day Mr. Hopkins, Averell Harriman, our Ambassador to the Soviet Union, and I urged upon the President the view that France should be represented on the Council, that they could not accept a zone without such representation, and that any other action would greatly humiliate them. The President finally reached the same conclusion, and he later succeeded in inducing Stalin to agree with him.

During all the consideration of the German question at Yalta, reparations were the chief interest of the Soviet delegation.

At that conference table Marshal Stalin sat between Mr. Molotov and I. M. Maisky, Deputy Commissar for Foreign Affairs. Maisky had served as the Russian Ambassador in London for eleven years, and at Yalta often acted as interpreter as well as adviser to Stalin. It was he who presented the Soviet proposal on German reparations.

"Our plan foresees that reparations in kind should be demanded from Germany in two ways," Mr. Maisky explained. "First, withdrawals from the national wealth of Germany. That means factories, land, machinery, machine tools, rolling stock of railways, investments in foreign enterprises, and so on. Second, yearly payments in kind after the war in the course of ten years."

He proposed that 80 per cent of all German industry should be withdrawn, specifying the iron and steel, engineering, metal and chemical industries. He added that aviation plants, facilities for the production of synthetic oil and all other military enterprises and factories should be withdrawn entirely.

"By withdrawal I mean to confiscate and carry away physically and use as reparations payments," he emphasized.

Mr. Churchill responded first to Mr. Maisky's statement. He recalled the experience of the United Kingdom after World War I.

"The process was a very disappointing one," he said. "With great difficulty about 1,000,000,000 pounds was extracted from Germany, and that would never have been extracted if the United States, at the same time, had not loaned Germany a larger sum.'

"Removal of plants is a proper step," he declared, "but I am quite sure you will never be able to get out of ruined Germany for Russia alone anything like 215,000,000 pounds a year." He pictured Britain's losses and heavy debts and referred to the severe losses of other countries which must be considered in allotting reparations.

"Secondly," Mr. Churchill continued, "there arises in my mind the specter of an absolutely starving Germany.

"If our treatment of Germany's internal economy is such as to leave 80 million people virtually starving, are we to sit still and say, 'It serves you right,' or will we be required to keep them alive? If so, who is going to pay for that? . . . If you have a horse and you want him to pull the wagon you have to provide him with a certain amount of corn—or at least hay."

"But the horse must not kick you," Mr. Maisky objected.

MR. CHURCHILL switched to a horse-kicking illustration by saying:

"If you have a motor car, you must give it a certain amount of petrol to make it go. I am in favor of having a reparations inquiry committee set up to explore this subject with the object of getting the most we can in a sensible way."

In presenting the position of the United States, President Roosevelt pointed out that after the last war we loaned Germany billions of dollars, and emphasized "We cannot let that happen again."

"We are in the position of not wanting any of Germany's manpower," the President said. "We do not want any of her machinery, tools, or her factories. There will be some German assets in the United States that might be credited against what Germany owes the United States, but it will amount to very little." After the meeting I advised the President that the best estimate placed the value of German assets in this country at 150 million dollars and that the value certainly would not exceed 200 million. He later used these figures to point out what an exceedingly small amount we would receive in contrast to other nations.

Marshal Stalin then entered the discussion. "The root of the trouble the last time," he asserted, "was that reparations were demanded in money. Then, the question arose of transferring the German mark into foreign currencies. That was the rock upon which reparations broke down."

Marshal Stalin urged that the three powers that carried the burden of the war should have priority in reparations. He said it must be admitted that "France did not have any sacrifice to compare to the three powers I have in mind." And then to clinch the argument, he said, "France at this time has in the war eight divisions while the Lublin government has ten divisions." There is no doubt that his opinion as to the claims of a government was influenced by the number of his divisions. He is credited with having said at Yalta, when reference was made to the views of the Pope, "How many divisions does he have?" The Marshal did not make that statement at Yalta. But it was the yardstick he frequently used.

The problem of Poland's boundaries was outranked in importance on the agenda of the Yalta Conference only by that of reconciling the difference between two rival governments of that country, one in Lublin and one in London. In a third installment of "Speaking Frankly," to be published tomorrow, Mr. Byrnes describes how the Allied statesmen at Yalta tried to solve these problems.

Clayton Resigns State Dept. Post

Shown by Survey

Newsmen Doubt U. N. Survival

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 15 (U.P.).—A survey by Newsweek magazine showed tonight that 75 per cent of the newspapermen covering the United Nations have doubts about the U. N.'s ability to survive.

Only 9 of 45 chief U. N. correspondents think current American policy in the U. N. is strengthening the organization, it disclosed. More than half of them think that while U. S. policy is not helping the U. N. it is "furthering the vital interests of the United States."

Many of the comments included in the survey complained that Secretary of State George C. Marshall has, as one correspondent put it, "remained on the sidelines while the United States delegates fumbled the ball."

Another said the Assembly lacked any outstanding delegates, and was only "an amazing collection of mediocrities."

The survey listed 45 correspondents, chiefly Americans but also representing the press of Europe, the British Empire, Asia and the Slav states. It listed 34 who thought the current meeting of the General Assembly had produced skepticism about the U. N.'s chances for survival; six who thought the U. N. "is doomed" and three who are undecided.

Undersecretary Cites Wife's Ill Health as Reason

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The resignation of William L. Clayton as Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs was made public yesterday with an exchange of letters between President Truman and himself.

Clayton, who is 67, asked to be relieved because Mrs. Clayton wished to return to their Texas home on account of ill health. He offered to remain available for special jobs if his services were needed.

At a farewell news conference shortly after release of his letter of resignation and Mr. Truman's acceptance, Clayton warned that the United States would endanger its own political and economic future if it refused to participate in the Marshall Plan. Europe's recovery, he declared, was essential to United States interests.

He added that it would be a "great mistake" to base this country's program of foreign rehabilitation on any nation's type of government. He also reiterated his belief that trade would be resumed between eastern and western Europe and that world prices would begin to fall in 1950 or 1951.

Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett said Secretary Marshall did not intend filling Clayton's place, for which legislative authority expires next August 1. He expressed the hope Clayton might find it possible to return and said most of his duties would be taken over by Willard L. Thorp, Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs.

Clayton revealed in his letter of resignation that he had endeavored to leave his post last January 6 and again, on May 14, had written that he would be forced to resign after the Geneva Trade Conference about September 1. After Marshall's Harvard speech June 5, which resulted in calling the 16-nation Marshall Plan conference at Paris, Clayton recalled that he had remained to carry out "certain tasks in Europe" connected with this conference.

He revealed that he wrote Marshall June 19 that he would be forced to leave October 1 and received a letter dated June 20 accepting his resignation as of that date. The date later was extended to October 15.

"May I repeat what I have often said," he wrote to Mr. Truman, "that it has been a pleasure and an honor to serve under you and various members of your Cabinet, all of whom have invariably extended to me every courtesy, consideration and support. I shall always look back upon my experience here with the deepest appreciation of the opportunity which it has given me to be of some slight service in difficult times."

Mr. Truman wrote accepting his resignation with "the deepest regret" since "your compelling reasons leave me no alternative but to accept."

"In a time of world upheaval and general economic dislocation," the President continued, "yours has been a contribution of incalculable value. During these past months while you have served the Nation at such personal sacrifice I venture to say that you have accomplished tasks that could hardly have been brought to such a successful conclusion without your guidance and counsel."

When Clayton first came to Washington in 1940 to take a key job in the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, he resigned as chairman of the board of one of the country's largest cotton firms. Later he became deputy Federal Loan Administrator under Jesse Jones and went from there to the Commerce Department as Assistant Secretary.

In the months that followed he was successively chairman of the board of the Rubber Development Corp. and of the United States Commercial Co., president of the War Damage Corp., vice president and trustee of the Export-Import Bank and administrator of the Surplus War Property Administration. He became Assistant Secretary of State at the end of 1944 and was promoted to Undersecretary for Economic Affairs, a position created for him, in August, 1946.

Norway Urges U. N. Study in Public Schools

By a Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 15.—School kids the world over may soon be asked to study the purposes, principles and Charter of the United Nations.

Norway today proposed that the United Nations recommend to all 57-member governments that this study be encouraged in elementary and secondary schools.

The United States had been considering a similar proposal—and wanted it started this school year. But it was shy about making the proposal itself—and for a simple reason.

Unlike many of the other member nations, the United States does not control education. That's left to the 48 States.

Some countries might want to sidetrack the issue for this busy session, by referring it to UNESCO for study. But the United States is opposed because 25 nations, including Russia, are not members of that organization and might not want to be bound by a UNESCO recommendation.

Wheat Prices Soar Again As Traders Ignore Drive

$3.25 for wheat for export to other countries than the United Kingdom.

Corn and oats followed the trend in wheat. Soybeans, however, ended 3½ cents lower and lard was 63 to 90 cents a 100 pounds under Tuesday.

Meanwhile citizen food committee officials worked at conferences with the Nation's bakers and brewers, urging ther cooperation in the food conservation drive.

A meeting with bakery representatives lasted until late in the evening without decision. A brief statement said that there was "no disagreement," but that a decision was delayed by "many interruptions."

One bakery official, however, took time out to declare that a committee hope to save three million bushels of grain monthly in the baking industry, was "astronomical and impossible."

Negotiations with the brewing industry over methods to cut down on grain consumption in the making of beer and ale resulted in a split between big and small brewers.

Austin Fisher, New York businessman, vice president of the food committee, met in an all-day session to bring the two groups together. Operators of small breweries were said to be insisting upon a smaller contribution than that required of large operators. An equal slowing down of operations, they argued, would hit them proportionately harder than it would their large competitors.

State Dinners Canceled

As one means of conserving food, the White House announced that all state dinners for the fall-winter social season have been canceled. Mrs. Edith Helm, social secretary for Mrs. Truman, said that six dinners have been called off. Only "light refreshments" will be served at five receptions for various Government dignitaries.

A tremendous increase in the amount of poultry in storage, which may encourage a relaxation of some rules for poultryless Thursday, was reported by the Department of Agriculture.

From September 1 to October 1 frozen poultry stocks increased from 183 million pounds to above 206 million. The amount on hand October 1 was more than 22 million pounds above a year ago.

In the same month egg stocks, including all types, frozen, shell and dried eggs, dropped from 14 million cases to 12 million—about one million cases above October 1 last year.

O'Dwyer Wires Support

A response to Luckman's appeal to mayors of the Nation's cities for aid in the food conservation drive was received from the largest municipality, New York City. Mayor O'Dwyer wired Luckman full support, and then called for return to price controls and food rationing.

With return of controls, he said, food could be sent to Europe "and at the same time food can be assured for our own citizens at prices they can afford to pay."

Officials of the food committee were frankly disturbed over where funds to operate the conservation program are coming from. Much of the operating expenses to date have been advanced by Charles Luckman, chairman of the committee, and $300,000-a-year president of Lever Brothers, Inc., soap manufacturers and some of his friends, it was reported.

Many of the workers at the committee's headquarters are volunteers; others have been borrowed from Government agencies and from industries, and some small amounts have been made available for necessary expenses from Government funds, it was stated.

Plans to finance the program by the President's Emergency Fund are reported stymied by the near exhaustion of that fund, due to demands upon it for emergency relief for hurricane victims.

Wagner, Flanders Investigating Housing Shortage

Senators Wagner (D., N. Y.) and Flanders (R., Vt.) were conducting housing investigations yesterday, hoping to have reports ready before Congress meets.

Wagner sent out a set of questions on slum clearance and Flanders asked for facts about high costs, which he called the core of the housing problem.

The Senators were acting as subcommittees of the joint House-Senate group set up to make a broad investigation and file a report by next March 15.

Bread-Saving Drive Shows Results Here

Greater Washington area residents are eating less bread, local hotel, restaurant and baking officials declared yesterday in reporting progress on the national "Save a Slice a Day" campaign.

Freeman H. Sisson, chairman of the baking division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said bread sales on restaurant and grocery routes last week showed a "definite decline," which he estimated at 3½ per cent.

He said the drop in sales started off showly, but gained as the week wore on. This week the drop will probably be even larger, he declared judging from early sales reported.

Ton Saving at Pentagon

John C. Cockrell, assistant executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, reported that "more and more restaurants are not serving bread or rolls unless asked" and "quite a number are no longer putting baskets of bread on the tables."

The executive secretary of the Hotel Association of Washington, Bourbon A. Dawes, said that although no survey has been made by the group he felt most of the 32 member hotels were no longer serving bread unless specifically requested.

Officials of the Pentagon cafeterias reported that early reports of the bread-saving program indicated a saving of a ton of bread a week. Patron cooperation with the slice-a-day program was reported as "excellent."

Government Services, Inc., operators of 44 Federal cafeterias, posted bread-saving slogan on counters last week. Cafeteria supervisors reported few customers requested bread.

Bakery Changes Unlikely

A spot check of restaurants and hotels revealed mixed reactions to the bread-saving drive. A seafood place reported that 75 per cent of its patrons continued asking for bread, while officials of the Carlton Hotel and the Hotel Raleigh said bread consumption was cut as much as 50 per cent.

Sisson, who is affiliated with the Continental Baking Co., said bakers were giving little consideration here to producing a smaller loaf or to cutting thinner slices as conservation moves.

He explained that Washington, like few other large cities, has a one-pound loaf of bread, which is usually suitable for family use. In other communities only a larger and longer loaf is produced. If a half pound loaf were baked, the cost would be almost the same as the one-pounder since labor and handling charges, principal cost items, would be the same, Sisson said.

Cockrell said most restaurant operators make a standard practice of using bread leftovers in various dishes, such as dressings and stuffings, as well as bread puddings.

Little drop in price of dinners at hotels and restaurants was predicted as a result of the bread-saving drive. Cockrell said restaurateurs hesitated to make meal prices "come out on odd pennies" and hotel operators said the savin on bread would probably be absorbed by the rising price of other meal items so that diners will continue paying present tariffs.

Pikes Peak Plane Crash Kills 3, Hurts 4

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—A missing Iowa National Guard C-47 transport plane was found smashed against a snow-covered north slope of famous Pikes Peak today, three of its crew dead and four injured.

One of the injured crewmen had dazedly stumbled down a mountain trail to bring out a story of the crash. He was identified as Master Sergt. John W. Knight, 28, of Des Moines.

Shortly afterward, a Colorado Springs hunter, Leonard Detherage, 28, clambered to the ship. He found six men, with both the dead and the living wrapped in parachutes, Knight apparently had done this before setting out for help.

Detherage said the three survivors seemed to be seriously injured and only one was able to talk.

Later rescuers brought injured and dead here.

Guard headquarters at Des Moines said the other men were:

Maj. Robert R. Oliver, Albert Lea, Minn.; Staff Sergt. Jack W. Glider, 38, and Sergt. Leo Simmons, all of Des Moines; Lieut. D. D. Clark, Minneapolis, and Maj. Joe Paraks, Regular Army man from Minneapolis.

Six on U. S. Plane Missing in Peru

Balboa, Canal Zone, Oct. 15 (A.P.).—U. S. Army headquarters here said today that six persons were believed aboard a United States air mission transport reported missing in mountainous northern Peru since Friday.

Four Flying Fortresses are searching for the missing craft. Those aboard:

Col. John R. Hawkins, San Antonio, Tex., chief of the United States Air Mission in Peru; Lieut. Col. Frederick G. Delaney, jr., Los Angeles; Lieut. Col. Harold D. Parks, Lancaster, Tex.; Master Sergt. Glenn Beard, Frankfurt, Ind., and Master Sergt. Joe A. Romero, Eagle Pass, Tex. (The name of the sixth was not given.)

Freed After 17-Day Fast

Dublin, Eire, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—David Fleming, 27, former officer in the Irish Republican army, was released from Belfast prison and moved to a hospital for the second time today after a 17-day hunger strike. Last November, he staged a 78-day hunger strike.

2 Snake Cultists Defy Law, Fined In Harlan County

Harlan, Ky., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Religiosu cultists gave two law-defying exhibitions of snake handling at the Harlan County Courthouse today in the first demonstrations of that type here since Kentucky's "snake law" went into effect in 1941.

Two men were fined $100 each in city court and the arresting policeman, Felix Belcher, killed the poisonous reptile in a public demonstration on the street.

A jury convicted Odie Shupe and W. H. Edmonds of nearby Cumberland. Neither testified. Each appealed.

Says He's Fighting Wall Street Group Which Is Seeking World Domination

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace, describing himself as engaged in a fight against a Wall Street group "which seeks world domination," said today that the Truman Administration is in the hands of a war party.

The former Vice President, completing a Nation-wide speaking tour in advance of his scheduled departure for Palestine in a few days, made his remarks at a press interview.

Wallace asserted that the Wall Street group seeks world domination "for profit" and its preparations for war threaten to produce war. This group, he said, is now in control in Washington, and in the Democratic Party. Pressed for names, he mentioned Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal, "the Truman Cabinet and other members of both the State and Defense departments."

Will Form "Peace Party"

Wallace said that if the group he named continues in control of the Democratic Party and it "insists upon becoming a war party, then I will do everything I can to help form a peace party or will back any other party which has an active program for peace."

Later, speaking to about 2000 John Hopkins University students, "Wallace said that if the Republican Party elected Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Harold S. Stassen next year, there was a possibility the party might remain in control for 16 years.

Wallace elaborated on his previous assertion that if Eisenhower were nominated for President and Stassen for Vice President, President Truman would have trouble carrying 10 States.

Wallace said that "I know General Eisenhower's brother, Milton, and he is one of the smartest cookies in this country. If the general would follow his brother's ideas, they could make this country a progressive capitalistic Nation."

Speaking at Enon Negro Baptist Church, he told about 250 persons that it is "time to take a stand all along the line against segregation. You are entitled to equal opportunities in education and employment."

Truman Doctrine "Bounces"

Wallace, in a lengthy discussion of Russia in his interviews, said that recent Russian attacks on the United States are the "Truman doctrine bouncing back, as if reflected in a mirror in a distorted way."

At another point he remarked that he knew that the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt had "high esteem" for Premier Stalin, although the President did express "uneasiness and irritation at the sometimes sudden change in Russian policy. He always felt we could get along with Stalin. I think we can get along with Stalin. I think the Russians have no intention of provoking war."

Wallace referred to his relations in 1934 with Dr. Nicholas Roerich, Russian scientist, sponsored by Wallace as head of an Asiatic expedition to search for drought grasses.

"Professor Roerich," Wallace said, "posed as having considerable scientific ability and also a knowledge of some of the Far Eastern languages."

He said he had no knowledge then, as Secretary of Agriculture, that the State Department disapproved of the appointment.

strikes to disrupt France in the few days before Nation-wide municipal elections on Sunday.

The directing bureau of the general confederation, which claims seven million members, issued its appeal for general support of the subway strike without directly calling for a general strike.

The appeal was made shortly after the government's refusal to renew negotiations on wage demands before the subway and bus strikers return to work.

Leaders of the National Gas and Electricity Workers Union, after fruitless negotiations with Premier Ramadier, called a meeting of national delegates tonight to discuss future action.

Union officials made no effort to hide their anger over Ramadier's attempts to reassure them that an interministerial committee would study their demands for 11 per cent salary increases.

Vehicles Requisitioned

Parisians, who have been walking, hitchhiking and bicycling to work in gasoline-rationed Paris, had more bad news when the taxi drivers' union prepared for a 24-hour strike tomorrow in sympathy with the subway and bus workers.

The government put more emergency bus and truck services into action throughout the day after requisitioning private busses and trucks, ordering in army trucks and calling for volunteers to drive them. More than 350 answered the first appeal for volunteer drivers.

Pumping Out Warehouse Ruin

The Washington Post

FIRE'S AFTERMATH—Tons of water were pumped from the ruins of the razed S. Kann Sons Co. warehouse yesterday as District fire officials began an investigation into the cause of the four-alarm fire which caused damage estimated at $100,000. The warehouse is at 310 8th st. nw.

Workmen yesterday began cleaning up the burned-out shell of the four-story warehouse of S. Kann Sons Co. at 314 8th st. nw., destroyed Tuesday by a four-alarm blaze.

The building was filled almost two stories deep with the water-soaked, charred remains of stock valued at $100,000.

Ropes, blocking off 8th st. from Market sp. to D st., kept a steady stream of curious from getting too close.

A fire truck spent all day pumping a small stream of dirty water from the basement.

Cause of the blaze has not yet been determined, according to Fire Marshal Raymond C. Roberts. He said the blaze apparently started in or near a pile of rugs in a front corner of the third floor.

The fire broke out shortly after 3 p. m. Tuesday. Four alarms brought out 92 pieces of fire apparatus.

Baltimore Printers' Hearing Blames ITU

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—Government and company attorneys today attempted to show that Baltimore Typographical Union No. 12 explicitly followed "instructions from the home office" of the International Typographical Union, as a National Labor Relations Board hearing went into its second day.

Trial Examiner William R. Ringer denied union motions for recess until Monday, and for separate hearings of the cases against the ITU and its affiliated local.

Both are charged in an NLRB complaint with "refusal to bargain collectively in good faith" in the first case against a union brought under the Taft-Hartley law.

Blocks Move for Delay

NLRB Attorney Sidney J. Barban at least temporarily blocked a union move for delay by failing to serve local president Charles V. Brannock with a subpena to produce certain ITU documents.

Barban offered "no comment" on whether the subpena had been issued and pocketed for possible use later.

Over objection, Earle K. Shawe, attorney for the Graphic Arts League—bargaining agent for 22 Baltimore print shops—whose "unfair" charge is the basis of the official complaint, introduced a contract proposal made by Brannock September 26.

The contract offer included the clause: the companies "cannot compel members to work with nonunion printers and apprentices and therefore agrees that any refusal of its employes to work with nonunion employes shall not constitute a breach of this agreement."

Shawe indicated this amounted to a closed shop, banned by the Taft-Hartley law. A minimum hourly wage rate of $2.20 also was provided.

"Home Office" Order

Shawe said this contract was drawn by Brannock "on instructions which he got from the home office and followed to the letter."

He asked Brannock, on the stand for the second day, whether the local "is bound by the policies of the international." Brannock replied, "To a certain extent."

Jacob J. Edelman, attorney for Local 12, denied this, and said the local is "an autonomous organization authorized to carry on its own collective bargaining."

Shawe branded the proposed contract "a one-minute contract," since it could be voided on 60 days' notice, and the Taft-Hartley law already provides a 60-day notice of strikes."

In Button Strike

Third Union Officer Held At Ridgely

Ridgely, Md., Oct. 15 (Spl.).—A third union official was arrested here this morning by the town bailiff as the strike at the Excelsior Pearl Works entered its ninth day.

Charles F. Tillman, jr., International Ladies Garment Workers Union official from Norfolk, Va., was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct for cleaning "several guns" while sitting in a parked car. A second charge of violating a town parking ordinance by parking less than 100 feet from the corner also was placed against him, Mayor Martin L. Sutton reported.

Tillman was released on $750 bond after being arrested by Town Bailiff James Fluharty. Tillman's fellow union official, Irwin J. Jaffe, assistant regional director, said Tillman was cleaning the butt of an unloaded rifle. He declared the barrel of the gun was on a rear seat.

Two union officials arrested last week are out on bail awaiting a hearing on disorderly conduct charges.

Jaffe said 31 persons were still on strike at Ridgely and 20 had returned. Mayor Sutton said 38 to 40 had returned and 12 were on strike. The Federalsburg strike was reported as static by Jaffe.

Officials of the button firm today declined to meet with union officials tomorrow at the call of the State Labor Commission, Jaffe said. Company officials would make no comment.

"restrictive legislation" and "including the right to strike."

He withdrew it in the face of opposition by the committee, which included in its report that the AFL "deplores acts of the several State Legislatures which restrict the rights of employes of the States, counties and municipalities.

UMT Opposed

Acting on a long list of resolutions and executive council recommendations, the convention approved almost in toto requests for support of the legislative program of the Government employes council.

Among these were legislative proposals for 26 days annual leave for Government workers, higher compensation, exemption of $1400 from income taxation of Federal workers, 25-year optional retirement law, upward revision of wages for all Government employes, opposition to temporary employment of noncivil service employes and increasing allowances for rural letter carriers.

The convention also approved a report of the executive council opposing universal military training in peace time, and pledging the AFL to seek greater appropriations for the "effective functioning" of the Department of Labor.

Delegates also urged early action at the next session of Congress to pass Federal antilynching legislation, abolish the poll tax, and enact a Federal FEPC. Prompt congressional action was urged "to prevent stalling action by filibuster."

Body of Woman Found in Trunk, Baby on Front Seat

Chicago, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The body of a woman, beaten and strangled, was found late today in the trunk of an automobile on a lonely road west of Chicago. A baby, believed that of the woman, was found alive in the front seat.

The body had been jammed into the luggage compartment of the car, face down. Sheriff's deputies said the woman's throat had been cut and her breasts slashed.

The woman was identified tentatively as Mrs. Catherine M. Wasil, 35, of suburban Cicero, the wife of Stephen J. Wasil. Relatives of Mrs. Wasil reported that she had a 15-month-old baby, William. The baby found in the car was about that age.

The car was found on a country road south of suburban West Chicago.

Red Authorities Ban U. S. Magazine

By the United Press

Soviet authorities have forced the American Embassy in Moscow to discontinue distribution of 3000 free copies of the State Department's magazine Amerika to top-ranking Russian officials, it was disclosed yesterday.

Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett told a news conference that the Soviet ban has been in effect for more than a month, and embassy officials are discussing it with the Russians.

The magazine is prepared by the State Department to give the Russian citizen a more balanced view of the American way of life. The ban does not affect the 50,000 copies sold on Russian news stands by a Soviet distributing company.

Diplomatic sources said Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, United States Ambassador to Russia told the department that if this and other recently-imposed Soviet import regulations are not relaxed, the size of the United States Embassy staff may have to be reduced.

Nineteenth annual banquet of the Central Business Association and election of officers for the coming year will be held at 7 p. m. tonight in the Federal room of the Statler Hotel.

Capital Transit Wage Hearings End Tuesday

Arbitration hearings on a request for 35 per cent increase in wages and other benefits for union employes of Capital Transit Co. will end Tuesday, it was announced yesterday.

Contract arguments have been presented by management and union representatives for 10 days before a three-man arbitration board at the Raleigh Hotel.

The board recessed yesterday, and will hold the final open sessions Monday and Tuesday. Then the board will go into executive session and come up with a decision. Three closed sessions are scheduled for next week.

Highlight of yesterday's hearing was the company's declaration that union demands on holiday, vacation and sick leave pay would cost CTC $1,169,000 a year.

The union has asked for one day's sick leave with pay for each month of service after a year; no sick leave is paid for now.

Eight holidays with pay is asked for by the union; there are no paid for holidays in the president contract, but employes who work holidays are paid at time-and-a-half rates.

The union also wants two weeks' vacation after one year's work, and three weeks' vacation after 10 years' service; now the employes get one week's vacation after one year, and two weeks' vacation after five years.

Immediate Session Demanded by CIO

Convention Wants Congress to Legislate Quickly on Price Control and Rent Issues

Boston, Oct. 15 (AP).—The CIO called today for an immediate session of Congress to bring back price and rent controls and rationing.

The national convention also asked for a new income tax policy which would raise exemptions to $1500 for an individual, $3000 for a married couple, with $500 deductions in addition for each dependent.

A group of resolutions asking fair and full employment and protection of veterans' rights was passed swiftly and with little discussion by the 600 delegates.

The convention asked reestablishment of price controls and rationing for food, clothing and other necessities in a resolution which declared "controlled monopoly prices dominate our entire economic system, which make possible heartless profiteering at the expense of all the people . . ."

The resolution asked congressional action to "recapture speculative and excess profits," and to eliminate margins on the grain exchanges."

In asking for extension of Federal rent control the convention also sought a large-scale program for the construction of rental housing by the Federad Government."

The tax resolution declared that "tax rates on the lowest taxable income groups must be reduced and any and all forms of sales and wage taxes must be rejected."

A resolution seeking Federal fair employment practices legislation said that "Negro, Mexican-American and Jewish war veterans . . . are facing far greater difficulties than other veterans in obtaining training and employment."

The CIO demanded low-cost homes, increased subsistence and training allowances for veterans and called for "democratization of the armed forces."

CIO Asks Aid For Europe

are intended to obscure the basic issue, which as I see it today, is simply whether or not men are to be left free to organize their social, political and economic existence in accordance with their desires; or whether they are to have their lives arranged and dictated for them by small groups of men who have arrogated to themselves this arbitrary power.

This issue is as old as recorded history. But in the world today it has assumed more menacing proportions than ever before. The great enemy of democracy has always been the concentration of arbitrary power in a few hands.

The particular theory used as a justification for the suppression and eventual elimination of civil liberties varies with the times. All such theories, however, contain within themselves the greatest of all historical fallacies, that in human affairs the end justifies the means.

I do not have to point out to this convention that the rights of labor and the hope and possibility of further gains for labor are absolutely dependent upon the preservation of civil liberties. The issue is not one of political labels, but whether or not civil liberties, the right of criticism and right of recall of individuals elected to governmental responsibility, remain intact . . . Among the first victims of any dictatorial regime, and notably of the police state, is the right of labor to organize itself for the protection of its interests.

The basic problem of world recovery is production. Production, of course, involves other critical factors—food, fuel, housing and communications, for example, not to mention political influences or controls. With reference to the situation in Europe, at the present moment the dominant factors are food and coal. Problems of foreign exchange, dollar shortages as now expressed, are heavily involved in the dilemma. I repeat that the immediate requirements at this time are food and coal.

Europe is entering upon another long winter. As has already been described by numerous observers and authorities, the situation is precarious. Outside assistance is absolutely necessary to prevent a really dangerous deterioration in health and morale before any carefully determined long-range program can possibly be put into effect.

There now exists the urgent necessity for positive interim measures to prevent a fatal deterioration in Europe—political, economic and psychological—"before Congress has sufficient time to consider and act upon a possible long-range plan for American assistance.

The present food-saving plan is one such interim measure. The committees of Congress, which are being scheduled to meet in November, will undoubtedly consider others. Meanwhile, the Administration will do all within its limited power to lend assistance.

These measures alone will not suffice. They are but a step—an all-important step—to prevent a collapse this winter.

We have now reached the point where 16 nations have submitted a preliminary plan, both as to their own agreed actions and as to what outside assistance they feel will be necessary in the next four or five years. At the same time, our resources have been reviewed in order that no step might be taken which would involve an unwise drain on our economy. The European plan is now under study by the various agencies of the Government concerned and by the special groups which were formed by direction of the President. Certain committees of Congress have planned to meet in a few weeks to consider first the measures which may immediately be necessary, and later the proposal soon to be submitted by the Government for assistance in the long-range rehabilitation of Europe.

Whatever form the proposal may take we must be assured that the participating countries will make every possible effort to reach the production rates they have set for themselves and that they will make the necessary fiscal reforms. We have great admiration for the fortitude displayed by the people of these countries under prolonged conditions of want and extreme hardship. But the present situation requires more than stoical, even heroic endurance. I repeat that basically the present problem of world recovery is one of production. And I add the comment that increased production emphatically demands harder work, and that in turn demands more, not less food.

The productivity of American farms and factories is of tremendous concern to the entire world. For that and other reasons we occupy a very special position in the world which carries with it a heavy responsibility which cannot be avoided, even if we might wish to do so. Therefore we must face the facts. The United States stands in the midst of a highly critical world period. The situation involves dangers which affect every American alike. It would be a great folly to assume that we can stand aloof or that we can straddle the issue. A very distinguished American recently stated that "no private program and no public policy, in any sector of our national life, can now escape from the compelling fact that if it is not framed with reference to the world it is framed with perfect futility." What endangers the United States endangers all of us—labor, industry and agriculture alike. Because the economic stability of Europe is essential to the political stability of Europe, it is of tremendous importance to us, to our [illegible] security, and it is equally important to the entire world faced with the danger of the actual disappearance of the characteristics of Western civilization on which our Government and our manner of living are based.

Guilty of Contempt

Josephson Gets Year, $1000 Fine

New York, Oct. 15 (INS).—Leon Josephson, Trenton, N. J., lawyer, whom Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) termed a Communist and one of the key figures in an espionage ring, was sentenced today to one year in prison and fined $1000 for contempt of Congress.

Josephson

Federal Judge Alfred Coxe imposed the maximum sentence permitted after a jury found him guilty. The jury deliberated only eight minutes.

When Jury Foreman Charles L. Moore, Rye, N. Y., announced the verdict, Judge Coxe said:

"That was about the only verdict you could return."

A moment later, Gerhardt Eisler, described by Congressmen as Russia's No. 1 secret agent in the United States, greeted Josephson. He shook his hands and slapped him on the back. Josephson showed no emotion.

Guns Blaze in Cuban Strike

Havana, Oct. 15 (AP).—Communist and progovernmental workers exchanged 100 shots today at the height of a Communist-called general strike that President Ramon Grau San Martin's administration said was "a complete failure."

An emergency tribunal ruled stoppage called in Havana Province was "against the stability of the republic" and ordered the detention of 150 strike leaders.

The order named two Socialist Party deputies, Lazaro Pena and Jesus Mendez, as among those listed for detention but they were not picked up because they enjoy parliamentary immunity. Only Congress can authorize their arrest.

Pena, secretary general of the Communist branch of the Workers' Confederation, had called for the work stoppage.

The non-Communist faction of the confederation recently was held legally constituted to act in the federation's name.

Arab Nations Vote to Bar Jewish Goods

Beirut, Lebanon, Oct. 15 (AP).—Arab countries voted today to close their frontiers to Jews as a new means of tightening their boycott on Jewish goods, Abdel Rahmano Azzam Pasha, Arab League secretary general, announced at the league council's final session here.

An attache of the league said Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, Trans-Jordan, Yemen and Saudi-Arabia adopted a number of other resolutions "increasing economic pressure on the Jews by boycott."

The league secretariat was instructed to prepare a note to the United States, Russia, France and Britain demanding independence under an Arab trusteeship for the former Italian colony of Libya. The league also voted full support of Egypt in its demands for evacuation of all British forces.

Arab Posters Removed By Palestine Police

Jerusalem, Oct. 15 (AP).—Jerusalem police tore down posters calling for an Arab national government and Arab volunteers for a "freedom army" tonight after a scuffle with Arab underground members at the Jaffa Gate to old Jerusalem.

The posters were signed by MGM (the Mufti's Good Men), supporters of Haj Amin el Husseini, exiled Mufti of Jerusalem.

Meantime, the Jewish underground organization, Irgun Zvai Leumi, said in a broadcast that it welcomed the Russian declaration before the U. N. recognizing the national rights of the Jewish people, but added it must oppose partition.

Fired Postal Clerk Loses Fight for Reinstatement

A Philadelphia postal clerk who was ordered dismissed because he engaged in political activity yesterday lost a District Court fight for reinstatement.

The clerk, Daniel B. Smith, was ordered discharged September 17, 1946, after a Civil Service Commission hearing on charges he circulated a petition for nomination of a candidate for city magistrate. The CSC action was taken under the Hatch Act.

Smith asked District Court to reinstate him on the grounds that he was not allowed to call witnesses in his behalf at the hearing.

Bolitha J. Laws, chief justice, rejected Smith's motion after Assistant United States Attorneys Daniel B. Maher and Oscar Dibble presented evidence that Smith had admitted circulating the petition which bore the signatures of 102 postal employes.

Franco Seeks Nobility Sayso

Madrid, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Gen. Francisco Franco has introduced a new nobility bill in the Spanish Cortes (parliament) giving him the power to strip a title from anyone deemed "unworthy" and to create an entirely new nobility, it was reported today.

Well informed sources said Franco was seriously considering naming an entirely new Spanish nobility, including prominent North and South Americans and Britons friendly to Spain and his government. These sources said such persons would be created dukes, marquises, counts and barons under a program similar to the Popes' custom of creating foreign nobles.

The new bill, so far unpublished in the press, was introduced quietly late yesterday for approval when a new session convenes, possibly late in November.

Spanish nobles and aristocrats who have managed to learn the contents of the bill were reported highly indignant over the bill's provisions. They pointed out that theoretically the government could deem the Duke of Alba's behavior "unworthy" and strip him of all his 32 titles.

The bill is a follow-up to Franco's recent bill proclaiming Spain a kingdom and giving himself the power to appoint a successor to the throne, now claimed by the exiled pretender, Don Juan.

Bishop Hit For Criticism Of Miracles

London, Oct. 15.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey F. Fisher, publicly rebuked today the Bishop of Birmingham, Dr. Ernest W. Barnes, for writing a book challenging the validity of such fundamental Christian issues as the virgin birth, the resurrection, Christ's miracles and the usefulness of infant baptism.

The Archbishop, ranking prelate of the Church of England, delivered his stern rebuke at the convocation of Canterbury at Westminster and implied that Dr. Barnes ought to resign his bishopric. Later Dr. Barnes told reporters, "There is no question of my resigning."

In his book, "The Rise of Christianity," Dr. Barnes denies the possibility of miracles and dismisses the virgin birth as "a crude semi-pagan story."

The physical resurrection also is denied. In the preface, however, Dr. Barnes says that he himself worships Jesus as Divine.

Dr. Barnes said he blamed the growing "alienation" from the church of young people mainly on the development of science.

"All they have learned by scientific training has convinced them that God acts uniformly through nature," he said . . . "Are we to allow the situation to go from bad to worse?"

". . . As a church, it seems to me that we must come to terms with science and scholarship, and make perhaps dangerous advances in so coming to terms or we face disaster."

Women Catwalk

N. Y. Subway Tunnel Jam Traps 4000

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Soot-blackened subway riders scrambled to safety through a smoky tunnel under the East River today after a rush-hour train stalled and stranded an estimated 4000 passengers.

Bregrimed women collapsed as they reached the surface after crawling along catwalks. More than a dozen passengers were treated for shock.

Four trains, with riders packed shoulder to shoulder, were held in the dark tunnel for more than an hour after the first train developed mechanical trouble.

Heat in the jammed cars increased. Women became hysterical, some fainted.

"There was fire under the seats," one man said. "The conductor tried to put out the fire with an extinguisher, but this made more black smoke."

Finally Roy Fullem, 23, former sailor, opened the doors of the first train by emergency handles. Scores from the train followed Fullem onto the tracks. Some were picked up by a passing train.

Inflation Helps Farmers Boost Income 400% in Seven Years

The present high cost of living is proving a bonanza for the Nation's farmers, figures just prepared by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics revealed yesterday.

The net income for farmers for this year is estimated at four times as great as in 1940. The net this year is forecast at 18 billion dollars, compared with 14.9 billion last year, 4.5 billion in 1940 and an average of 4.8 billion in 1935-39.

The gross income for American agriculture will reach 34.3 billion, BAE estimated, or 18 per cent above last year. The increase in income is considerably larger than the increase in costs of production, so that the net expected will be about 20 per cent above last year.

Cash Receipts Up 21%

Cash receipts from farm marketings this year are estimated at 29.7 billions, or 21 per cent above a year ago. This is the largest percentage gain since 1943.

Cash receipts from livestock are up about 23 per cent over a year ago; from crops about 19 per cent. Wheat, corn, cotton, hogs and cattle are the commodities showing the largest gains, with wheat showing the largest percentage gain. Receipts will be larger this year for all important commodity groups except fruits and nuts.

Prices of wheat are averaging this year about one third more than last year. This means that the increase in the total cash received for wheat will be "as much as 75 per cent over last year" due to the all-time record production.

Small Corn Crop Offset

High prices for corn will more than offset the smaller marketings due to the much smaller crop, the report says.

The following table, showing the tremendous increase in returns for agriculture during the war and postwar years, was prepared by BAE:

In Billions of Dollars	1947	1946	1940	1935-1939
Cash receipts	29.7	24.5	8.4	7.9
Government payments	0.3	0.8	0.7	0.5
Gross, incl. food consumed, rent, etc.	34.3	29.9	11.0	10.4
Production expense	16.3	14.0	6.5	5.6
Net	18.0	14.9	4.5	4.8

Aerial Lochinvar Will Face the Music

Oslo, Norway, Oct. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Louise Forsell Kaage said tonight she and Lieut. Thorsten Akrell, who took her from a mental hospital in Stockholm and flew with her in a light plane to Norway, had decided to return to Sweden and face the consequences of their act.

She told a reporter she planned to appear as a defense witness if Akrell is tried in connection with the incident. The couple made a forced landing Monday near Kongsberg, Norway, after their dramatic flight.

Audit Shows Fund Misuse

lows how funds were withheld from Juvenile Court:

"The collection sheet prepared for deposit at Juvenile Court would necessarily reflect the typewritten date of the day following the collection day, but investigation revealed that this typewritten date would be changed, in ink or pencil, or have a stamped date superimposed thereon, in order to bear a date which would not be questioned by the financial clerk, but in some instances, dates were not changed even though the deposit was made at a later date.

"By sliding deposits, that is, retaining a day's collections and depositing a later date, but in the interim withholding the latter deposit, the accounts would be kept in a fairly current condition. Usually the amounts withheld were paid on or about a Police Department payday (7th and 22nd of the month) and thus the defalcation was covered."

Support Payments to Continue

After a conference with Juvenile Judge Fay Bentley on October 9, Pilkerton announced that the police precincts would continue to accept money paid for the support of wives or children, but that new safeguards would be taken to protect the money.

Yesterday's report recommended that a pre-numbered triplicate form be printed and issued to the precincts. These forms would be issued in blocks of numbers, the auditor being advised in each instance of such issuance.

In accepting payments, the precinct would issue the original receipt to the payer, retain the first carbon copy for precinct files and attach the second carbon copy to the collection sheet forwarded to the Juvenile Court financial clerk.

In order to avoid the loss of property of prisoners, Pilkerton recommended that "a more comprehensive system" should be installed to handle lost, stolen or abandoned property.

Entries in Bound Book

A bound book, he said, should be used by the arresting officer to list all the property involved. Space would be provided for the date, description of property, name of arresting officer and other information.

The station clerk would sign a receipt for the property and forward the property to the property clerk with the prescribed property form. Upon return of the receipted form, an entry would be made, closing the record. Property envelopes as well as property forms would be prenumbered.

ALL beef sold at Safeway is U.S. Government graded

It's Safeway Beefsteak . . . cut from a top grade of beef . . . aged marvelously tender

Proper aging's a secret of tender Meat

. . . but that's just one step in Safeway's special plan

We hold all Safeway meat in air-conditioned aging rooms at our Central Meat Plant, under daily inspection, until the meat comes to its full eating perfection

2. But first—For this unique meat service Safeway experts buy only the top government grades of beef.* This means, for example, that the boiling beef you get at Safeway is from beef of the very same top government grades as our finest rib roasts. (And Safeway also buys only top grades of lamb, pork and veal.)

3. Then we cut our fine quality, correctly aged meat free of excess bone, needless fat and waste. This scientific waste-free trimming of bulk cuts at our Central Meat Plant—and additional trimming at the Safeway market—are done before your Safeway meat purchase is weighed. So you get a money saving

4. At tip-top goodness these wonderful meats go to your Safeway. Our meat delivery trucks are refrigerated, and the meat packed in sterilized containers. It's because we do take extra care that we can guarantee you mouth-wateringly juicy, tender meat every time you buy at Safeway

Atlantic Rescue

The 69 persons who are now safe aboard the Coast Guard cutter Bibb can thank their lucky stars that the ship was nearby when their airplane made a forced landing 820 miles east of Newfoundland Tuesday. They can add a measure of thanks for the pilot's skill in landing. Also they need to be grateful for the fact that they were making their transatlantic crossing in a flying boat rather than in a land craft; a land craft would not have remained afloat two minutes in the mountainous North Atlantic seas. Not all details of the rescue are yet known, but any rescue at sea is dramatic. Apparently this particular instance was even more noteworthy because it was carried out without loss of life and in a raging storm over a period of many hours. This is the sort of heroic duty for which the Coast Guard is justly famous.

Undoubtedly the Civil Aeronautics Board will want to know the cause of the accident—whether it was motor trouble, whether the pilot lost his bearings, or whether the plane ran into unexpected winds and had insufficient fuel to continue to Newfoundland. Whatever the cause, this one rescue so efficiently accomplished more than justifies the clause of the International Civil Aviation Organization under which the United States maintains the Bibb as one of a chain of weather and rescue ships across the Atlantic. The unfortunate fact is that the United States has reneged on its obligations to ICAO. We have agreed to maintain six such ships and to operate another jointly with Canada, while European nations also supply six closer to their shores. Congressional penury, however, has held the American ships actually in operation to two. Perhaps this example of ICAO's effectiveness will induce a new attitude in Congress. Despite the remarkable safety record of scheduled airlines operating across the Atlantic—and this particular plane was a nonscheduled contract carrier—a full complement of rescue and weather ships would be a tremendous asset. It will be interesting to learn whether lack of sufficient weather information which additional ships might have provided was the cause of this brush with death.

Gutter Diplomacy

Not very long ago it was thought that the nadir of political rhetoric had been achieved in the diatribes of Hitler against those who opposed him. But after a reading of some of the recent debates at Lake Success the speeches of Hitler seem by contrast the height of elegance and urbanity. At almost every recent session one delegate or several delegates from Soviet Russia and its satellites hurl insults of a character that would surely have scandalized an eighteenth century Billingsgate fishwife or a nineteenth century Dublin marketwoman. Even the recent verbal debauches of Mr. Vishinsky have been surpassed in venom and vulgarity by some of his spokesmen, notably Ales Bebler of Yugoslavia.

On the whole the delegates from countries outside the Russian orbit have exhibited an almost heroic forbearance, ignoring the insults and confining themselves to a logical discussion of matters on the agenda. Belgium's Mr. Spaak particularly deserves a compliment. But sooner or later the truth of the famous adage of Menander and St. Paul about evil communications and good manners must find another illustration at Lake Success. A note of exasperation has crept into some of the replies, as the result of the Communist tactic of pouncing upon every statement, however innocuous, as reason for befouling the air. There was, for example, Mr. Mattes of Yugoslavia. When a Chinese member of a committee which is concerned with such matters observed in all innocence that the question before the committee was whether "to recommend or not to recommend" that the agenda of a proposed press conference be reconsidered by the Social and Economic Council, Mr. Mattes of Yugoslavia was on his feet to shout indignantly that the delegates had not come to Lake Success to be lectured about the soliloquy of Hamlet.

Even the press reports reflect the atmosphere of increasing tension and suppressed anger. As our reporter, Mr. Kuhn, has observed, a statesman at Lake Success no longer replies to another, but "lashes back" at him; speakers no longer assert, but "flatly declare" or "bluntly deny"; a debater no longer expounds his case, he "flings down a challenge"; a vote is no longer a mere decision, it is a "victory" for one side and a "stunning blow" for the other; the Chair no longer rules on points of order, it "cracks down" or it "sternly warns." The Russians and their camp followers have succeeded in making the United Nations seem less and less like a body of grave and deliberate statesmen and more and more like a Saturday night in a mining town saloon.

Off With Their Heads

Before the machinery of the President's loyalty investigation program has had a chance to get into motion, a scant three months after Congress reluctantly granted it an inadequate appropriation, Chairman Rees of the House Civil Service Committee has pronounced it a flat failure. This is scarcely surprising, since Mr. Rees predicted it would fail as soon as the President proposed it. Nothing, in the Congressman's opinion, would be in any way satisfactory save his own extreme and extravagantly expensive program, passed by the House but neglected by the Senate in the closing rush of the last session.

Mr. Rees bases his impatient "I told you so" on a single case involving an employe of the Federal Public Housing Authority who has not yet been fired although in Mr. Rees' opinion he is a "known Communist." The fact that there has not yet been time to set up a loyalty board to review charges against the employe, that there has not even been time to investigate the charges (if any have actually been made prior to the Congressman's diatribe), seem to concern him not at all.

It is this attitude that employes ought to be dismissed on mere suspicion without regard for their rights or reputations that makes the Rees bill, and the President's order as well, potentially so dangerous to a free society. Neither the bill nor the executive order affords the safeguards against injustice and against governmental tyranny which have been the fountainhead of American freedom. If either were to be administered in the spirit Mr. Rees suggests, it could inflict irremediable injury upon many innocent persons.

The proof of the President's program will be in the performance. If it is administered with conscientious care, if the Civil Service Commission is able to persuade men of high caliber to serve on its loyalty board, if they prove resolute in resisting the kind of pressure that Mr. Rees seems determined to bring, it may be possible to avoid the excesses invited by the lax standards and inadequate review procedure contained in the executive order. But it is this sort of care in administration which Mr. Rees seems eager to forbid. The very character of his condemnation should serve as a warning against the legislation he seeks to substitute for the executive order. With Mr. Rees' approach, the loyalty program would inescapably degenerate into a mere hunt for heresy.

Population Boom

Last week the Census Bureau made public its estimate that the population of the United States has grown by 2,279,000 in a single year. Perhaps this growth is most easily visualized by observing that if all the residents of Philadelphia were to make room for this increase there would, even assuming the same congestion of living quarters, be enough of the increment left over to fill another city of the size of Denver. The figure, in fact, represents the greatest addition to the population in any single year in the history of the country.

Where did it come from? Certainly not from immigration, which has been virtually suspended since the beginning of the recent war, and even before that the annual influx represented no more than a slight trickle by comparison to the immigration figures for any year between 1840 and 1914. Thus we scarcely need the Census Bureau's explanation that virtually all the newcomers are to be accounted for by procreation within our own country. We must, however, reconcile this with the fact that for more than half a century the birth rate of the United States has been generally declining. There was a slight interruption to this tendency during and immediately after World War I, and another is evident now, but it does not yet appear that the trend has been reversed or even permanently interrupted, as will be seen by comparing the rate of 35 births per thousand population in 1880 with that of 21.5 per thousand in 1943. Thus, although all but 251,000 of those who arrived here in 1946 for permanent residence are native Americans, the proportion of new babies to the whole population is less than half what it was in 1800. The explanation for the rise in population in spite of this trend is, of course, the even more rapidly diminishing death rate, or in other words the excess of births over deaths.

Not many years ago the actuaries were confident that the drop in the birth rate would soon overtake the drop in the death rate. They believed that before the end of the century the population of the country would become static for a time at about 180 millions, which would be followed by a gradual decline of population. The estimates were based on the assumption that the practice of contraception would be adopted by larger and larger numbers of women as social conditions, such as the movement of population toward the larger cities, and the increasing activity of women in industry and business, made the rearing of families difficult or inconvenient. There was the further assumption that medical science would sooner or later exhaust the possibilities of prolonging life. Thus a steadily larger proportion of the population would be beyond the age of maximum fertility or beyond the age of reproduction. These phenomena had long been evident in France and in western Europe generally.

Perhaps these forecasts should now be revised, though it is much too early to say that the general trends have really been reversed. The upward turn in the birth rate continues, but it has far to climb before it reaches the figure of fifty-seven or fifty-eight years ago. Meanwhile, we may note that either a declining or a rapidly growing population would bring its own problems. A diminishing population would weaken us militarily, and there is abundant historical evidence that nations in which the dominant age group is beyond middle life rapidly lose their cultural vigor and power of survival. But a rising population increases pressure upon the means of subsistence, and in this connection it is not encouraging to be told that in the century and a half in which the United States experienced the most prodigious growth of population in all history the arable soil of the continent was being reduced by approximately one half by erosion and other preventable evils.

Refuge For The DPs

As was to be expected, members of the special congressional group which went to Europe to see the displaced persons camps there are returning with the conviction that America must aid in the relief of their tragic plight. Men with human sensibilities could react in no other way. The pity is that ignorance insulated the sensibilities of so many members of Congress during the last session that action on the DP problem was deferred. No doubt those who have had a firsthand view of the tragic refugees still awaiting liberation will be able to dispel the prejudices that beclouded the minds of their colleagues. As Representative Frank Chelf, a member of the investigating subcommittee, observed, the DPs, almost without a single exception, are, as we have ourselves insisted, violently anti-Communist as well as anti-German. And so far from being the dregs of Europe, the great majority of them, as he reported, are, as we have likewise reported ourselves from personal observation, industrious and hard-working.

The subcommittee, according to Mr. Chelf, believes that this country should ask the other members of the United Nations to work out a plan for immediate absorption of the DPs into all of the democratic nations. This is, of course, what the International Refugee Organization was established to achieve. This, then, is the logical agency of the U. N. to deal with the problem. What is needed from this country—and its urgency can scarcely be overstated—is congressional action to guarantee that the United States will admit whatever number of DPs the IRO may allocate to us. The number is not likely to be very large; after all, there are now fewer than 800,000 DPs seeking relocation. Perhaps this country will not be asked to take even as many as the 400,000 over a four-year period provided for in the Stratton bill. But whatever the number, leadership on the part of the United States is the indispensable key for unlocking the gates of the DP camps.

Invasion Of Homes

Strong underpinning has been given to the constitutional safeguards against invasion of private homes by the opinion of Judges Edgerton, Stephens and Miller of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The court upheld a judgment of $6500 against the estate of the late Marshal John B. Colpoys whose deputies had forced their way into the home of John J. Foreman in trying to serve civil process on a lodger. The evidence indicated that the deputy marshals struck and arrested Mr. Foreman because of his resistance. "Forcible entry of a dwelling in order to execute civil process is an actionable wrong," the court pointed out, and even the death of the responsible official does not prevent the collection of damages from his estate.

This penalty for lawlessness in the process of enforcing the law may well be noted by officials everywhere. "Lawless invasion of homes is the more menacing in a democratic society," Justice Edgerton wrote, "when it is committed by public officers. The forcible entry of appellee's home would be answerable, even if it had not led to the infliction of personal injuries." This strict granting of redress for invasion of a home seems the more important because the Supreme Court, in a different type of case, recently permitted the conviction of a defendant to stand even though the evidence against him had been found in a general search of his apartment under a warrant issued in connection with a wholly different offense.

EXILE

I look on kingship in high pines;
I walk through park-wide gardens, grown
With white blooms rarer than the rose,
But they are not my own.

This sun, that shreds slow morning mist,
After the film of night is spun,
Stiffens my flesh with flameless cold;
It is a Stranger-Sun.

Where thread-thin twigs cut black, before
The last spread of blue evening dye,
Thse hard, impassive stars flare on
Out of an alien sky.

Down deepened streams, no mother-nymph
Sings me warm-throated welcoming;
The bitter water that I drink
Flows from a silent spring.

I hear no reed-drawn call, to be
One with the wheel of night and day;
While my lips thirst, on stone-green sod,
Old gods sleep far away.

Community Chest Goal

Local 27, UOPWA, CIO, was shocked to learn of the low goal set by the Community Chest Federation—a goal more than one million dollars below the estimated needs for the various social service agencies. The federation set this goal in the face of increased demands for social service and pitifully inadequate salaries for its own employes because they felt that Washington citizens would not subscribe to a higher goal.

The newspapers have done a splendid job in bringing into the open the plight of school teachers which ultimately led to the improvement of their conditions. But nothing has been said and done about the social service worker who in another field performs an equally important job. Here are some facts:

Professional workers (4 years college, master's degree and experience) are earning $1950-$3410; yet positions in the Federal Government requiring similar training begin at close to $3400 and we all know that even Federal salaries have not kept pace with soaring living costs.

Some maintenance workers have been found to earn less than the amount their agency gives to families who come to them for financial assistance! Clerical employes earn, on the average, $300-$400 less than similar persons in Federal service and private industry.

These facts were recognized last year by the Community Chest Federation which recommended substantial salary increases. However, these have never been granted and employes have in the past year actually received a salary cut, because annual increments normally due them have not been paid and all reclassification for qualified workers has been prevented.

Further cuts are now imminent. In answer to a letter written by our union, Mr. Bell, president of the Community Chest Federation, stated that unless the goal of $3,900,000 is oversubscribed, "agencies in varying degrees will find it necessary to limit the scope of their programs; some by accepting fewer applications for service by selecting only the more pressing, others by curtailing their plans to extend their services to more individuals, others by postponing activities that are desirable, that many will not be able to complete their staff of necessary workers and that merit and tenure increases to staff workers will need to be postponed."

If the community could be acquainted with the serious inadequacy of the services offered to this city there would be, not only an oversubscription to the present goal, but the full budget of five million dollars asked by the agencies would be met.

"Know Your Washington"

Members of the League of Women Voters have been following with much interest The Washington Post stories and editorials on District government, with special attention to the careful spadework you are doing in preparing District citizens for the Auchincloss report and the hoped for recommendations it may contain. We feel that The Washington Post is doing a most commendable piece of work along this line, and one of inestimable value to the community.

The general indifference and lack of knowledge that exist among District citizens concerning the present inadequate and outmoded machinery of government is appalling. So, in line with the league's policy of trying to do something about a problem when it meets one, the District league will give a "Know Your Washington" course of four lectures, open to the public, at Pierce Hall beginning October 21 and continuing on October 28, November 4 and November 12. This is planned as a preparatory course to the big job ahead for District residents, when the Auchincloss report is issued and must be evaluated.

The lectures, to be followed by discussion, will be entirely factual, covering historical background and the present set-up of the District government. The speakers will be District officials and other qualified specialists on District affairs. This is in line with the nonpartisan policy of the national league, which was organized 27 years ago to promote political responsibility through an informed and active participation of citizens in government.

We feel that the "Know Your Washington" course has real value for any District resident. There will be a charge of $1 made to nonleague members, however, to help us defray expenses. Registration for the course may be made by calling Decatur 7408 or Republic 5778.

Speed Of Sound

An article on a robot rocket plane test in Padstow, England, in The Washington Post of October 9, is in error.

According to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, technical note No. 1120, the speed of sound for sea level and 30,000 feet is as follows (standard conditions):

Altitude	Speed of Sound
Sea level	760.9 m.p.h.
30,000 ft.	677.8 m.p.h.

Restrictive Covenants

This past week I received literature advertising homesites for sale at Stratford Hills, Arlington, Va. The first sentence under ". . . Covenants Running With the Land" stated: "No person of any race, other than the Gentile Caucasian race, shall use or occupy said property . . ."

As a member of the "Gentile Caucasian race" I am ashamed to think that it can be profitable for real estate people to attach such a race prejudice clause to their transactions. I have informed the agent of my unwillingness to make any purchases that would require me to accept race prejudice. I hope that other Gentile Caucasians may be induced to do likewise, so as to hasten the day when any attempt to attach a race-prejudice clause to a transaction will be very bad business.

Can it really be constitutionally legal for an owner (who, of course, has the right to sell or refuse to sell to whomever he wishes) to bind a new owner to the doctrine of race prejudice? M. L.

Mr. X's Article

Perhaps it would be of interest to your readers to know that "The Sources of Soviet Conduct," the article by Mr. X, which has been discussed by Walter Lippmann in 14 articles in your pages, is now available in pamphlet form.

The July issue of Foreign Affairs, in which it originally appeared, is sold out; and, in view of the continuing demand, we have reprinted it for separate sale as a pamphlet.

Food-Saving Program

Mr. Drew Pearson's letter addressed to Mr. Charles Luckman of the Citizens Food Committee appearing in The Washington Post of October 11 seems to me to make very interesting and valuable suggestions.

To dramatize this food-for-Europe program both here and abroad would sell the program to our own citizens. The idea of a train rumbling across the country taking gifts from people along the way could be made into really a stunning pageant of friendliness.

HELEN L. HANNA.

The foreign-aid program of the Truman Administration must be discontinued. The Truman Doctrine is a doctrine of national disillusionment and disaster. Under the Truman Doctrine, this Nation is being bled white for the purpose of supporting the peoples of Europe. These United States are being stripped of their natural, physical, and economic resources for the sole benefit of European nations. Now, President Truman is embarking upon a starvation program, which will weaken the very life of the Nation. The Truman Doctrine embodies high and burdensome taxes and starvation rations to "take care of our commitments in Europe." They seem to be more sacred than obligations in the United States.

It is time for American military, and civilian, and economic representatives in Europe and Asia to pack their suitcases and come home. Their presence over there bears no good fruit for this Nation. MARTIN S. PRATT.
Washington.

I was greatly disturbed the other day by Herblock's cartoon of three fat, satisfied Americans thanking God for the food heaped upon their table while the pale ghosts of thousands of starving European children stood by. The cartoon impressed upon me, as sermons and articles and columns have not, that there is something we fat members of the middle class can do besides lugubriously wringing our hands for one hour each Sunday and donating perhaps one fiftieth of our incomes to European relief.

President Truman's meatless and eggless days are, of course, something, but I feel they are not enough. More than half the meals at our house have been meatless since the start of the Taft inflation. Keeping faith on Tuesdays and Thursdays will burden us not at all. Therefore my wife and I have conceived a plan to accomplish a little more. We have written our relatives and friends and asked them to send food packages through CARE rather than send us Christmas gifts, and we have promised to do likewise. The plan has merits which are not altogether charitable, too. Consider the time saved in Christmas shopping.

EDGAR ALLEN PRICHARD.

Sensible citizens are wondering why the European food "emergency" was not foreseen and provided for months ago. Or was this "emergency" deliberately planned for the purpose of stampeding the public and Congress into hasty, ill-considered action? And perhaps President Truman's veto of the tax-reduction bill also was calculated to provide "WPA" funds for such "emergency."

It seems quite probable that after some European nations have tried communism, they will become disillusioned and seek active cooperation with that efficient capitalistic producer of abundance, Uncle Sam. Meanwhile, the American people would be wise to demand that the Administration's foreign aid plan be held in abeyance and food shipments sharply curtailed until Congress can pass on it. STANLEY F. MORSE.

Commonplace Starvation

Food And Facts

WHAT THE average American will do about saving food in order that hungry Europeans may eat still hangs largely in the balance.

Groups, such as the distillers, have responded with definite sacrifice. But so far individual response has been lukewarm. There has been no enthusiastic following of the example set by the CIO in canceling its annual convention banquet this week to use the money to send food packages abroad. Yet mass public dinners are one of the biggest sources of food waste, since a large proportion of their served plates are returned to the kitchen half full of picked-over food.

The average consumer in grocery store or restaurant is still indifferent about food sacrifice, or, as it is put more prettily, "changing food habits." The propaganda that foreign shipments of food have caused high prices has been too well disseminated. And junketing Congressmen's reports that they failed to see Europeans dying of hunger in the streets has fortified some citizens in their complacency.

Worse still, there are scattered reports of hoarding by housewives who fear a return of rationing. Self-justifying cliches about charity beginning at home and "foreigners over there" being too lazy to work are heard increasingly. As yet little emotion outside of the baser stomach variety has been aroused.

HOWEVER, the educational work of the Citizens Food Committee has scarcely gotten under way. It is possible that the barrage of signs, posters, advertisements, speeches, radio talks will pump new zeal into a people jaded with appeals to their better nature. It is possible enough self-restraint may be wrung out of the public to supply by a husk the extra 100 million bushels of wheat needed for Europe's immediate hunger crisis. But no support of any depth can be counted on for voluntary food sharing or to back up rationing and price controls if these prove necessary unless people are moved by some stronger motive than duty.

It is not pleasant to admit that Americans can only be reached through appeal to self-interest. Some national leaders consider this a low form of strategy—would depend wholly on American generosity. Others would scare citizens into sacrifice by waving at them the red flag of communism. Still others recognize that an appeal to self-interest means a lot of unpopular fact stating—and that no one wants to bell the cat with 1948 elections so near.

Experts on mass persuasion say the public mood on food sharing is no better, no worse, than what might be expected in a postwar emotional letdown. Americans are no less generous than they have been, but appeals to help the hungry have become old stuff to them. Stories of hungry children—who are out of sight—have become as commonplace to them as the perils of the atom bomb. For eight years they have heard so much of hunger and suffering that these no longer prick their hearts or their consciences. The hungry masses of the world have become as trite as the once "starving Armenian."

AMERICANS have been handled too gingerly to have much sense of what the European hunger crisis means. Virtually everyone seems to have been afraid of the words "eat less." No one has boldly asked "Why shouldn't well-fed Americans eat less—a whole lot less—when 29 per cent of them are overweight and their fellow men are desperate for the food on which peace may hinge? No one has questioned the "waste less" slogan and asked "Why waste at all when floods and droughts have cut the world's food supply and set the horsemen of hunger and pestilence to riding again?"

Since the average American soon will have to face international facts in relation to the Marshall Plan, now would seem the time to break the news to him. It is all part of the same picture. Unless Europe gets immediate relief there will be no Marshall Plan.

A good strong dose of economic truth telling—not in sugar-coated form—from those in both parties who can speak with authority is needed, as is also an educational campaign by community leaders. Only in this way can the average person be awakened as to how his own safety and prosperity depends on Europe's well being. Only thus can the housewife, the key to home saving, be made to realize how European food riots, unemployment, civil conflicts, revolutions and counterrevolutions may even within a few months affect her husband's job, savings, taxes, give impetus to another depression and determine whether her sons shall go to school or to war.

Proper Foods

M. W. Fodor, in his interesting article in The Washington Post of October 12, quotes his friend as asking, "Why not give him the cheaper products which he appreciates?"

I'd like to add an item to his list. I recently received a letter from Germany stating:

"We have now been able to buy some American flour. Unfortunately it is very refined, white flour. We are unable to get whole wheat flour or bread."

It would appear that a bushel of wheat yields more whole wheat flour than white flour. Sending whole wheat flour would not only be appreciated more, it also would help bridging the gap between the grain available here and the amount needed over there.

Calling Washington

Facade In Paris

PARIS—In the golden October sun, Paris is like a once-great beauty who now faces a dubious future. She is sitting for her portrait, and in the sunlight her splendor is a little frayed.

Childs

She has come through a great deal. She has had to resort to shabby and even sordid tricks to survive. But she has survived and, on the surface at least, the flash of her old spirit is there.

But those who know her, her intimate friends and relatives, know that this is a facade. It may deceive a passing Congressman from America, for whom the great lady will put on a gallant show. Yet no amount of show can suppress the gnawing doubts and the deep fears for the future that lie close to the surface on the eve of a winter that will at best be cold and hungry.

It will be the third winter since the liberation, and it may bring more misery than the other two. Reserves of essential products are down almost to nothing. There is no soap in France today except for scraps that survive in retail shops and private homes. No soap means that the disease graph will move upward, paralleling the upward rise of the hunger graph.

American help is vital if Paris is to survive this winter. Even with the essential minimum of help, the margin for law and order will be small.

The government to Premier Paul Ramadier is pathetically weak. No one of either the right, the left or the middle seems to believe in it. There are constant rumors of suppressed scandals. One observer remarked that the French government should have a ministry of scandals so that they could be thoroughly coordinated and not scattered all over the place.

BECAUSE the government is so weak—equivalent, as ordinary Frenchmen will tell you, to no government at all—the French economy continues to unravel. Prices continue to rise. The currency inspires less and less confidence. More and more trade finds its way into the black market.

France today may have the greatest gold hoard in its history. But this is not in the coffers of the government. It is in the strong boxes and secret hiding places of the French peasants. Gold in one form or another is almost the only thing for which the farmer will exchange his butter and his wheat.

On the farms, too, is hoarded grain. How many hundred thousand tons are held off the market, no one knows with any accuracy. The farmer has slight reason to sell his produce when he sees so little that he can buy.

Aggravating all this is the tragedy of a crop that may be only half that of last year, which was below the prewar average. The unprecedented cold of last winter, the floods of the spring, and the searing drought of the summer just ended have cut deeply into a food supply of which every ounce was badly needed.

With privation and suffering for millions a present or an imminent reality, there are contrasts that violently assault the visitor. The motto hung over a bar filled with comfortably, well-fed people says: "You never saw a safe deposit box following a funeral procession." At times you feel this is the dominant mood—eat, drink, and try like hell to be merry, since nobody knows what tomorrow will bring.

LUXURY restaurants are filled with diners, most of them French, who pay outrageous prices for luxury foods and wines. The Folies Bergere is sold out every night to visitors from the provinces who snatch at this tawdry gaiety.

Some of the lavish spenders are black market profiteers. But most of them appear to be ordinary citizens who want to get rid of the little money they have while it will buy a good dinner. The French have, of course, always put food high on the list of pleasures.

The season just ending on the French Riviera was a brilliant one. The big resort hotels are still jammed to capacity. Off Cannes and Monte Carlo were many yachts, underscoring the fact that an estimated 40 per cent of business in France manages to evade taxes.

You put that alongside the expedient of a dishwasher in the kitchen of one of the big restaurants, who steals waste fats which he makes into crude soap to sell on the black market. Millions are living by such desperate expedients.

Crowds of shabbily dressed people pass through the Louvre, staring at the great art treasures out of Europe's past that have once more come out of hiding. A magnificent exhibit of impressionist painters has drawn similar crowds who can see in the superb Monets and Renoirs the solid world of the last century.

In the golden light of autumn the city seems to dream of the past. The innumerable monuments to ancient glory and the familiar buildings with their grace and dignity take on a new glow. France has had a great past and she may have a great future but, for the moment at any rate, very few seem to believe in it.

Note Of Optimism

By Barnet Nover

Is The Red Tide Ebbing?

RETURNING from Europe, after a trip that took him into 24 countries, Representative Karl E. Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota, struck a surprisingly optimistic note.

NOVER

The advance of communism in western Europe, he said, has been "stopped cold" and "could be turned into an ebb tide very easily." He saw a quarter of a century of peace if not as a "certainty," at least as a "possibility."

Such optimism is in sharp contrast to the black mood which characterizes the thinking of most people regarding the present world outlook.

There has been over a period of many months a steady growth in uneasiness, a sharpening of tempers, a rising tide of disillusionment and even despair regarding the outlook for peace, world recovery and progress.

NOW IT WOULD be the rankest folly to discount the very grave dangers that confront us.

These dangers are immediate, acute and real. The sober and authoritative London Economist was not exaggerating when, recently, it declared that "the economic crisis of which the fuel shortage in Britain in February was at first a distant rumor is flooding into Europe through every crack and culvert."

If the advance of communism in western Europe has actually been "stopped cold," and there is much to be said in support of that contention, the Red tide is not yet ebbing. It is far too early to assume that the danger of that tide breaking through all existing barriers and flooding the continent is over.

The greatest of these barriers are (1) the self respect of the democratic peoples of western Europe and (2) the hope that with American assistance they will be able to surmount their present acute financial and economic difficulties and get back on their feet.

If the second proves an illusion, the first may be swept away and western Europe will be left wide open to communism.

WE CAN TAKE it for granted that Russia and her fifth columns in the west will do all in their power to persuade the people of Italy, France, Great Britain and the other countries that the hope of American aid is, at best, an illusion and, at worst, a danger.

They will capitalize every sign of hesitation, weakness and indifference this country may show when Congress begins to consider the Marshall Plan. They will also squeeze every ounce of advantage for the Kremlin out of the war psychosis which they are so busily engaged in generating.

They know, what not all Americans seem to realize, that the decisive stage in the struggle for western Europe is at hand. They know that if they do not win now they will never win.

DURING THE PAST year the only important political advance made by Russia was in Hungary. In eastern Europe they have had to content themselves with consolidating their position by brutal means. But even there the job cannot be brought to full fruition as long as Russia is not in a position to supply her satellites with those raw materials and industrial products which they need.

Unable to do anything for the economic recovery of the nations of eastern Europe and the Balkans, Russia is determined to block the recovery of western Europe. For if western Europe recovers, the pull the latter will exert on the nations that lie east of the iron curtain is bound to be considerable.

IN THE MEANTIME, in western Europe, communism is making no gains.

The Rome election is a straw in the wind.

Of all the countries of western Europe, Italy seemed most likely to succumb to Communist pressure. Broken by the war, with a very large number of unemployed and a working class movement that gives much support to the Communist party and its left-wing Socialist allies, Italy was clearly vulnerable to pressure from Moscow.

The Rome election showed that the Communist tide in Italy is making no real headway, that, on the contrary, the left-of-the center moderate group of Christian Democrats is stronger than ever before.

It is, no doubt, because a similar anti-Communist tide is likely to be manifest in the municipal elections in France, that the French Communists, despairing of victory at the polls, have begun to resort to direct action in the form of paralyzing strikes.

The time calls for courage, clear-headedness and daring. We can win the cold war if we do not lose our nerve and if we act boldly. The financial weapon happens to be of the very greatest importance at this moment. It is hardly a time to count costs. There is no time for delay.

Career Job Program Falls Behind

FINDING JOBS for laid-off career people is as big a problem as ever—if not greater. Civil Service has found positions for 440 and placements are running at a rate of 100 a week. The number to be placed, however, is constantly growing.

Kluttz

When the "tough" Civil Service placement program was inaugurated several weeks ago, there were about 1500 displaced career people to be placed. Today that number has grown to 1911 despite the several hundred jobs found in the meantime.

The program took an unexpected turn. It has attracted hundreds of laid-off employes to the commission who had either planned not to take other Federal jobs, or else they had expected to find positions for themselves. Consequently, the rate of new applicants is exceeding the rate of placements.

Early next week the commission plans to order several agencies to fire three war service employes for each career worker they have failed to place. Each agency was given a quota of accountants, auditors, economists, statisticians and administrative people to place. Those who fail to fill their quotas will be penalized by the mandatory firing orders.

NAVY: There will be no mass transfer of Navy employes to the Pentagon, at least not for another year or 18 months. Perhaps half a dozen or so top Navy officials will be moved to the Pentagon, but nothing like the 2000 or so employes as had once been talked about.

A survey of the space problem has convinced top officials that the series of proposed moves would not be feasible. Also, there isn't as much vacant office space in the Pentagon as had been reported.

FEDERAL TRADE Commissioner Lowell B. Mason swung a haymaker at his own colleagues and other Federal officials in a speech to the Chicago Bar Association the other day. He said in part:

"Instead of talking about the vested interests in business, we should look to see whether there be vested interests in agencies of Government and monopoly in bureaucracy.

"The confusion about the laws of commerce has become so universal that it imperils our American system of free competition. I am inclined to think the error has grown too big for a few superbrains in Washington to remedy."

Mason, a close friend of the President, suggested the bar investigate to determine whether there is racketeering and monopoly in the Federal bureaucracy.

REVENUE: William T. Sherwood, the No. 1 assistant commissioner of Internal Revenue, is eligible for retirement. He can be expected to leave his post before many more weeks.

MERGER: The International Emergency Food Council will be merged soon with the Food and Agriculture Organization of U. N. The council, whose executive secretary is D. A. Fitzgerald, former Agriculture official, is made up of representatives from 34 nations. Its big job has been to fix food allocations for the needy countries. That responsibility will be taken over by FAO.

NOTES: Arthur B. Focke has been promoted to attorney for the estimates division at the Budget Bureau . . . Navy Secretary Sullivan has ordered his staff to write his letters with a "personal touch" and to drop the cliches . . . The first meeting of the to-be-created Civil Service loyalty review board has been set for either the last Monday in this month or the first Monday in November.

CENSUS is recalling a few of its grade 2 and 3 clerks who were laid off last June because of budget cuts. About 50 have returned and several hundred others will be asked to take their old jobs back before the end of this year.

The agency is preparing to take a census of manufactures to get under way by January 1. This job will require about 500 new employes here and several hundred others in the field for a period from six to eight months.

Civil Service has given Census authority to hire whatever new employes it needs for a period not to exceed six months to handle the new job. But the bureau is recalling its laid-off and experienced employes in order of their retention preference.

The temporary jobs now opening up in Census may last longer than anyone can now anticipate. A Senate-approved bill would require the agency to make a business census next year. It will be taken up by the House when it reconvenes, and if approved the job would require about 800 more people here. And in 1949, the egency will prepare to take the big 1950 population census—a job that will take at least 50,000 temporary employes the country over.

Census is one agency that has hired over its quota of displaced career economists and statisticians. It has a Civil Service quota of 21. Twenty-eight have been hired.

A. M. Hyde Under Knife

New York, Oct. 15 (AP)—Arthur M. Hyde of Trenton, Mo., who was Secretary of Agriculture under Herbert Hoover, underwent an operation today in Memorial Hospital but his post-operative condition has not yet been determined, a hospital spokesman said.

The operation was described as a "pancreatico-duodnectomy." Last month he underwent a previous operation.

Atom Puzzle Cleared Up By Cyclotron

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 15 (U.P.). Prof. Ernest O. Lawrence disclosed at Yale today that the University of California's 4000-ton atom-smashing cyclotron has unlocked another secret of nature, this time, the probable solution of the mystery of what holds the world together.

Lawrence, cyclotron inventor, said that the new findings are confirmation of a theory proposed about 15 years ago by the German physicist, Werner Heisenberg.

Atoms, which make up all substances and matter, are composed of protons, neutrons and electrons. The accepted theory places the protons and neutrons in the nucleus, or core, with the electrons encircling the nucleus like the planets circle the sun. They have a negative charge and are attracted to the positively charged nucleus.

Mystery Explained

The mystery has been what keeps the protons and neutrons from flying apart.

This is the problem that apparently has been solved by the experiments in Professor Lawrence's laboratory at Berkeley, Calif. Simply put, Heisenberg's theory is that the protons and neutrons bounce together, with the neutrons, which have no charge naturally, capturing the charge of the proton and the proton losing its charge; turning into a neutron.

This exchange of force serves as the "binding force" for the nucleus, under Professor Lawrence's findings.

The experiments were done by using neutrons, emitted from beryllium, as bullets to bombard paraffin, containing many hydrogen atoms, which have the simplest nucleus of all, consisting of one proton.

Billiard Ball Example

Lawrence likened the bombardment with neutrons of such a nucleus to a billiard ball collision. The "cue ball" ordinarily would strike a target ball only a glancing blow, tending to continue its path at an angle in the same general direction.

The scientists found high energy protons emerging in a pattern they would expect of the neutrons.

The only conclusion, Lawrence said, was that the "exchange forces" theory was right. When the bombarding neutrons struck protons in the target a glancing blow, the charge on the proton oscillated between the two particles.

As they moved apart, the neutron acquired the charge of the proton, becoming a proton, and the proton became a neutron.

This apparently goes on constantly within the nucleus of the atom.

Herbert Marks Quits as AEC Chief Counsel

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

A $4000 pay cut voted by Congress last summer cost the Atomic Energy Commission the services of General Counsel Herbert S. Marks yesterday.

Marks resigned, saying he hated to leave the AEC, but that he could not afford to stay, and was leaving November 30, or before, to practice law here.

President Truman named Marks as counsel when the AEC was set up last October. When his nomination went to the Senate he became the target of a long round of attacks on the part of Senators McKellar (D., Tenn.), Bricker (R., Ohio) and others. So did Chairman David E. Lilienthal. Just the same both were confirmed when their names went to the floor.

However, when Congress went on its pay-cutting spree last session, Marks' salary was trimmed from $14,000 a year to $10,000.

Marks told The Washington Post he wanted to make it plain that his resignation did not grow out of any rift with the AEC, with other officials, with Congressmen, Senators or anybody else. The fact was, he said, that he could not afford to stay in the public service at the lower salary.

To Chairman Lilienthal, Marks wrote:

"The commission, I feel sure, will know without my saying more, how difficult and painful it has been for me to make this decision."

Aviation Board Under Transport Chief Proposed

C. H. (Dutch) Schildhauer, retired Navy captain, told the President's Air Policy Commission yesterday there should be a civil aviation commission responsible to a single national transportation chief.

The veteran flier, who played an important part in building up the naval air transport service during the war, also recommended:

1. Annual appropriations up to 25 million dollars for research and development in the field of military-type cargo planes.

2. Authority to spend up to 100 million dollars a year for building transport planes useful as Navy or Air Force auxiliaries.

3. A plan for selling transport planes "essential to national security" to authorized airline operators from a Government pool at "reasonable" prices.

Young Quits CAB for $16,500 Airports Post at Los Angeles

Clarence M. Young has resigned as member of the Civil Aeronautics Board to accept a $16,500-a-year post as general manager of the City of Los Angeles airports, it was announced yesterday.

In accepting his resignation, President Truman regretted the circumstances which made it necessary for Young to leave his post for the better-paying West Coast job.

"I appreciate particularly the sacrifice that you have made in continuing in office beyond the period when you felt that you had to leave," he wrote.

Young submitted his resignation August 11, it was said. A Republican, he formerly was with Pan American Airways and was a one-time Assistant Secretary of Commerce. There was no indication as to his successor.

Newspaper Editorial Writers Meeting in Washington Today

More than 100 newspaper editorial writers from all parts of the country will assemble at the Statler Hotel today for the first annual meeting of the National Conference of Editorial Writers.

The three-day session, opening at 9 a. m., will include background discussions of United States foreign policy, atomic energy and national defense, as well as evaluation of editorial pages, and descriptions of municipal editorial campaigns.

President Truman will meet members of the convention at a special press conference tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the White House.

Kennan to Open Meeting

George F. Kennan, head of the policy planning division of the State Department, will open the meeting today. Other speakers will include David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, and W. W. Waymack, member of the commission. Secretary of Defense James Forrestal is expected to meet with the group Saturday at the Pentagon Building in a discussion of national defense problems.

Newspaper discussion leaders include Henry L. Mencken, former editor of the Baltimore Sun; Ralph Coghlan, editor of the editorial page of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Will C. Conrad, chief editorial writer of the Milwaukee Journal; M. B. Ronald of the Mitchell (S. Dak.) Daily Republic; Philip Wagner, editor of the Baltimore Morning Sun; Robert Lasch, chief editorial writer of the Chicago Sun; John H. Crider, editor of the Boston Herald; Richard B. Fowler, editorial writer on the Kansas City Star; Donovan H. Richardson, chief editorial writer of the Christian Science Monitor; W. H. Grimes, editor of the Wall Street Journal, and Paul H. Trescott, editorial writer of the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Outgrowth of Seminar

The conference is an outgrowth of the editorial writers' seminar of the American Press Institute at Columbia University, and has as its purpose to improve "the conscience and the quality of the American editorial page."

The temporary organization committee which has planned the conference consists of Leslie Moore, chief editorial writer of the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette, chairman; Ralph Coghlan, editor of the editorial page of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, vice chairman; John H. Cline, chief editorial writer of the Washington Star, secretary; Robert H. Estabrook, editorial writer on The Washington Post, treasurer; Russell Briney, associate editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and Kenneth McArdle, editorial writer on the San Francisco Chronicle.

Advisory Committee to Start Revamping Taxes Next Week

unions and other organizations now tax-exempt.

How much revision of the basic tax law will be put through Congress next session is open to tongue-in-cheek speculation at this point. With elections coming up, there is growing Republican sentiment for laying the groundwork for over-all changes next year, and pushing them through Congress in 1949.

That course, if adopted by the GOP high command, will mean two separate bills—a revived Knutson tax reduction measure next session for election year use, to be followed after the elections by fundamental revision of the law.

Married Couple Plan

This strategy contemplates picking up at least one of the recommendations of the advisory group in the revamped Knutson bill—the provision permitting married couples to split income for tax purposes.

With husbands and wives in 13 community property States now having the split income privilege, pressure for extending the same benefit to all reached a new high in the last Congress. Both Knutson and Senate Finance Chairman Eugene Millikin (R., Colo.) assured members it would be "considered" next session.

To overcome opposition to the change from community property States themselves, still another feature may be added to the Knutson bill applying Federal estate taxes to only half of the communal estate of the spouse who dies first.

The GOP hope is that these two changes, plus some possible excise tax revision, will pick up enough Democratic votes to override a Presidential veto of a third quick try at tax reduction.

As opposed to this "quickie" bill, the Magill advisory group is studying long-range revision. It's stated objective is to develop a stable and elastic tax structure that would not require fundamental overhauling every few years. To deal with 17 distinct tax problems, running the gamut from capital gains and losses to estate and gift tax revision, the committee is divided into one to four man subcommittees.

Its transactions tax proposal was described at this stage as "merely a suggestion." One source said it should more properly be called a general manufacturers' excise tax, of the nonpyramiding type now used in Canada. The "suggested" rate is 2 per cent.

Double Taxation

The proposal to eliminate double taxation of dividends was made originally in 1945 by a postwar tax policy committee headed by Magill. Magill's plan: Allow the individual who receives a dividend a credit to offset the tax already paid by the corporation. The credit would be calculated by multiplying the dividend by the lowest-bracket individual income tax rate (19 per cent).

Another subject under review was the center of bitter controversy last Congress session between Knutson and the Treasury—stock options. Knutson contends stock optioned to an employe to create incentive interest in a business should not be taxable as income until it is sold. The Treasury holds otherwise.

The capital gains and losses provisions also under study, have been attacked chiefly because they do not permit complete allowance of capital losses against ordinary income. Some also contend that six months is too short a period to distinguish between long term and short term gains and losses.

Other subjects being studied include: More liberal treatment of earned income in the middle brackets, Section 102 restrictions on unreasonable accumulation of corporate earnings, payment of estate taxes during one's lifetime by purchase of non-interest bearing Government securitities and tax relief to small corporations.

Judge to Hear Oyster Injunction Plea Monday

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—All of next Monday has been set aside by Judge Julien Gunn of Richmond Circuit Court to hear arguments on a petition for an injunction that would prohibit the Commonwealth of Virginia from interfering with the "purchase, tonging, sale and transportation of seed oysters" out of the State.

For arguments today, Attorneys Beecher Stallard and Lee Ford, representing oystermen seeking the injunction, asked the judge for an immediate temporary injunction so that the plaintiffs might begin oyster activities that they claim the State now prohibits illegally.

Bond was offered by these attorneys to serve as protection for the Commonwealth, but Assistant Attorney General Walter R. Rogers argued that "no bond will protect the seed oysters."

Plaintiffs are J. R. Haughton of Warwick County, Cornelius Campbell of New Jersey and the Oyster Tongers and Seafood Workers Union No. 265 (AFL). Defendants are Attorney General Harvey B. Apperson and Charles M. Lankford, jr., Commissioner of Fisheries.

Interior Official Predicts Many To Suffer From Cold

By International News Service

A Government official testified yesterday that a critical oil shortage in the United States will cause many persons to suffer from cold this and next winter and will force the shutdown of factories with impending unemployment.

Max W. Ball, director of the oil and gas division of the Interior Department, told the Senate Small Business Committee that the oil shortage will not be alleviated until 1950 or 1951.

He agreed with earlier testimony by Russell B. Brown, general counsel for the Independent Petroleum Associations, that "a lot of people will be cold this winter."

Differ on Blame

Brown blamed the situation on the decision of the Truman Administration to export 840,000 tons of steel to Saudi-Arabia for the construction of an oil pipeline by 1950. He said the domestic oil industry needed the steel for its own wells but was unable to get it.

Ball stoutly disagreed that the export of steel was the cause of the coming hardship. He testified:

"In our opinion, fewer people will go cold, fewer industries will shut down and few people will be out of work by the building of the pipeline by 1950."

FPHA Expects To Balance Its Books by 1948

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Government will be able to balance the books of its three-billion-dollar war housing investment by the end of 1947, Federal officials said yesterday.

Dillon S. Myer, head of the Public Housing Administration, in which the Federal Public Housing Authority is now incorporated, told the Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures yesterday that there was no basis for charging "fraud" against FPHA.

Earlier the committee had heard General Accounting Office officials and auditors state flatly that it was impossible to audit FPHA's books for 1945 and previously because of the confused bookkeeping methods.

Myer said the Government had built some 930,000 war housing units, and that his agency was now certain it could untangle bookkeeping difficulties.

Senator Herbert O'Conor (D., Md.) subcommittee chairman, said the committee had instructed GAO to continue its probe into FPHA's snarled financial tangle.

Myer insisted that Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) had no basis for saying a $26,250 fraud had been uncovered in the agency's Atlanta branch. Myer said the local authority had every right under the law to establish the $26,250 operating item, and to reserve income in any one year for expenditure in a subsequent financial year.

Earlier, Herbert Emmerich, former chief of FPHA, said that during the war years his agency had only "kindergarten people" to handle the complicated business affairs of the agency.

His remark was made in reply to a comment by E. B. Van Horn that ordinary high school graduates could have prevented some of the deficiencies unearthed by the GAO.

"It's just a rotten situation," Van Horn declared.

Russian Mill Output Up 18%, Grain Crop 58%

Moscow, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The state planning commission announced today that Russia's grain harvest showed a 58 per cent increase while industrial production soared 18 per cent above last year's figures.

Old Gold's share of the Alphabet spells PLEASURE

Chanted, telegraphed or spelled backwards, the only meaning a cigarette has is the one it delivers to your taste.

Old Gold means pleasure. And we make mighty sure it reaches your home base.

How? By starting with glorious tobaccos. By aging, blending, making them into cigarettes with all the know-how of nearly 200 years' experience. By making every honest effort to have Old Gold the most delicious smoke that human beings can produce.

Old Golds are good. Mighty good. If you haven't tried 'em because of brand habit, just slip out of the old rut once. Sneak in an Old Gold.

State Opposes Md. Sales Tax as Ballot Issue

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—Whether Maryland's retail sales tax can be put before the voters for approval or rejection depends upon what the term "appropriation" means in a constitutional amendment, was argued before the Anne Arundel County Court today.

Attorney General Hall Hammond and an aide, Richard W. Case, argued that appropriations and revenue were inseparable and hence the controversial 2 per cent tax is not subject to referendum.

On the other hand, Attorneys Carroll H. Albaugh of Annapolis and Samuel J. Fisher of Baltimore maintained the sales tax was not "an appropriation." As a result, they said, it can be put to a popular vote at the 1948 general election.

After hearing three hours of argument, Judge William J. McWilliams announced he would prepare an opinion in about two weeks. He asked counsel for both sides, in the meantime, to check and inform him of public documents printed just before the referendum amendment was passed in 1915 for evidence of what the Legislature intended in the measure.

Albaugh and Fisher represented four taxpayers who asked the court for a writ ordering Secretary of State Bertram L. Boone to place the sales tax on the ballot. All four are directors of the Maryland Economic Council, which has denounced the sales levy as a means of revenue.

Robert I. Balck, chairman of the council, said the organization would continue to fight the tax when the General Assembly meets in special session in several weeks. Besides Balck, petitioners for the writ were Alfred T. Truitt of Salisbury, Herman L. Mills of Hagerstown and Henry J. Starr of Westminster.

Hammond contended that the sales tax fell under a constitutional provision that laws making an appropriation "for maintenance of State government" could not be put up to referendum.

Albaugh termed the sales tax "a mischief" because it is "oppressive." Fisher said small businessmen in counties bordering Washington were being "ruined."

U. S. Owns 2% of Maryland Land Area

By The Associated Press

Fourteen Federal agencies own about 132,000 acres of land in Maryland, a House committee report showed yesterday, or about 2 per cent of the total land area of the State.

The tabulation, prepared for the Committee on Public Lands, which is continuing a study of local tax problems brought about by the Federal ownership of land, discloses that Uncle Sam owns about 24 per cent of the land area in the United States.

Large Federal ownership in Western States accounts for the high total.

The United States Forest Service is the largest Federal land owner in the Free State, the tabulation shows, with 43,478 acres. Next in size are the Army, with 30,099; the National Park Service, 16,020; the Navy, 12,140; the Agricultural Research Administration, 11,764, and the Fish and Wildlife Service, 10,868.

The figures are based in most instances on 1943 and 1944 data.

Eig's 12th Anniversary Sale

MAKE OUR HOLIDAY YOUR HOLIDAY...
COME IN and SAVE!

1934
Eig's was one of the first liquor stores issued a license after prohibition's repeal, and Sam Eig set about the task of bringing to Washington the best products from the best distilleries, at the lowest prices.

1935
Eig's built the building it is in now, at that time, and still, one of the most modern and attractive stores in the city.

1936
By this time many people had bought, tasted, and approved Stitzel-Weller products from Eig's... so Eig's, on customer's approval, contracted with the distillery for a continuous supply of Kentucky's finest bourbons.

1937
Eig's introduced "Mammoth Cave" a sour mash bottled-in-bond bourbon . . . and people who knew fine bourbon bought "Mammoth Cave," tasted it, smiled, and recommended it to their friends . . . "Mammoth Cave" was soon established as a favorite, exclusive brand at Eig's.

1938
This year "Town Hall," a popularly priced straight Kentucky bourbon, was introduced at Eig's, and the people who knew fine bourbon selected "Town Hall" as another of their favorites, exclusively at Eig's.

1939
Eig's won first prize of $10,000 in the nation-wide Keg-line contest, in which 112,000 stores and bars participated, for best job of displaying and promoting beer and ale in keglined cans.

1940
Bourbon buyers in Washington show their preference in bourbons when they buy Eig's exclusive "Mammoth Cave" and "Town Hall," more than all other 27 brands offered in the store at that time. Demand for Eig's exclusive brands of Kentucky bourbons by Washingtonians DEFINITELY ESTABLISHED by this overwhelming preference.

1941
With the beginning of war and pending grain shortage, there were many people who wanted to stock up with their favorites. For these people Eig's released ample stocks of whiskies, scotches, and imported wines and champagnes.

War Years-Whiskey Shortages
Eig's publishes a statement of policy in which Eig's promises to offer immediately upon bonded age, its reserve stock of Stitzel-Weller bourbons, without fear or favor, to everybody. Not only has Eig's maintained that policy, but in 1544 Eig's contracted with the Medley Distilling Co., Owensboro, Kentucky, for a continual supply of "Mellow Bond" and sold it AT POPULAR PRICES when Washington was witnessing its greatest liquor shortage. Eig's gained nation-wide publicity in newspapers and magazines, including Fortune, June, '47, issue.

Because there were no whiskies produced in 1943, 1944, and part of 1945, there is now a critical shortage of straight, aged whiskies, and many long established name brands of straight whiskies are now offered as a blend of whiskey and spirits.

Eig's, as before, will continue to offer you the best Kentucky straight bourbons from the best Kentucky distilleries . . . at popular prices.

withstood best the rigors of the plane pitching in 35-foot waves and the hazardous transfer to the cutter by lifeboat and liferaft, Captain Cronk reported.

He also radioed as the Bibb dipped toward calmer seas that there was an acute shortage of diapers aboard.

Displaying understatement to Coast Guard headquarters here Captain Cronk radioed:

"We feel very much relieved that this experience is over."

Many accounts of individual heroism were yet to be told, but the skipper said that Lieut. (j. g.) Clarence S. Hall of Avon, Mass., who became a father while the Bibb was on weather patrol, "last night had the pleasure of rescuing a baby not much older than his. He got quite a jolt out of it."

Admiral Joseph F. Farley, commandant of the United States Coast Guard in Washington, congratulated the entire crew of the Bibb for an "exceptionally well done" rescue.

Tribute was also paid to the Coast Guardsmen by the captain of the ditched Boeing Flying Boat, Charles Martin, who termed it a "magnificently done" job.

windows. We have short-circuits of strife and strikes in our power-lines of production and shortages of food and material resources in our larder . . .

"We must decide now whether we are to make sacrifices which will win the peace, or blind ourselves to the hurricane warnings and continue to live in that kind of house."

Rickenbacker praised the Marlands should fall and the Red Flag shall Plan for aid to Europe, saying "we must do everything possible, short of weakening ourselves, to save Europe from serfdom."

"If those western European should fly over fortress Europe—then we may truly say that the 'fat is in the fire.' With Europe 'at heel,' the Red spread would extend over Africa and Asia.

"America would be next.

"Out of the cover of night, Red bombers would streak across the Atlantic from the Azores. Others would fly over the North Circle route, others across the pole, and still others from Siberia. And, for everyone of them, it would be 'target-America.'

"If the bombs were atom bombs—well, draw your own picture. I do not have the heart."

SCC Board to Act As Arbitrators

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—H. Lester Hooker, State Corporation Commission chairman, said today the SCC's three members have agreed to "act in their individual capacities" as arbitrators of a wage dispute at the Petersburg and Hopewell Gas Co.

Hooker said a letter would be sent to the company and to the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, AFL, advising them of the commission's decision. Charles J. Verlander, union representative, had suggested the SCC act as an arbitration board.

Strike notice, effective October 23, has been filed by the union, which is seeking a 7½ cents per hour wage increase.

Assets Up 75% For Perpetual In Eight Years

By S. Cliver Goodman

Perpetual Building Association, which will observe its sixty-sixth birthday on Monday, has shown a 75 per cent increase in assets in the last eight years.

Baltz

President Edward C. Baltz reported yesterday that resources currently exceed 91 million dollars, as compared with $51,792,313 on October 20, 1940. For the tenth successive year, Perpetual maintained and strengthened its position as the largest institution of its kind in the Nation. Its assets are more than 20 million ahead of its nearest competitor.

Currently, Perpetual's surplus and reserves exceed $9,300,000, more than doubling the $4,365,005 on October 20, 1940. Its striking growth is emphasized by the fact that it has recorded a new peak of 70,000 individual accounts.

Perpetual's rapid expansion is considered a Washington financial phenomenon. At the close of its first year's operations in 1882, Perpetual had total assets of $27,485. In 1925, assets reached 10 million and by 1935 had quadrupled to more than 40 million. Its growth is illustrated by these figures for the last seven years as of October 20:

	Assets	Surplus and reserves
1941	$82,100,232	$8,390,601
1942	73,239,097	7,362,746
1943	65,868,909	6,592,424
1943	60,093,956	5,966,389
1945	56,734,244	5,494,318
1947	54,216,152	4,936,478

In addition to President Baltz, officers include Marvin A. Custis, board chairman; Samuel Scrivener and Thornton W. Owen, vice presidents; William H. Dyer, secretary; W. S. Martindill, treasurer; Ernest A. Thomas, C. Gordon Rouse and Henry J. Baltz, assistant secretaries; W. Jennings Brown and A. L. Garrett, jr., assistant treasurers, and William H. Rippard, auditor.

ISSUE AWARDED: A three-million-dollar issue of Washington Suburban Sanitary District water and sewer bonds was awarded to a group headed by Phelps, Fenn & Co., and including Ferris & Co., Inc., of Washington. The winning bid was 100.05 for 270s. Upon reoffering, the bonds are priced to yield from 0.90 per cent for those maturing October 1, 1948, to 2.90 per cent for those maturing October 1, 1987.

BEER THREAT: Corn and barley shortages may threaten both quantity and quality of the Nation's beer this winter, 3000 delegates to Master Brewers Association were told yesterday at the Cleveland convention. One speaker pointed out that "unless . . . effective steps are taken to increase supplies of malting barley, quality (of beer) will of necessity suffer to take care of quantity demands."

ODD LOTS: Willys-Overland yesterday announced three new motor cars, including a convertible-type sport model for production next year . . . United States District Court approved application of Missouri Pacific Railroad trustee to pay $19,093,665 in interest on three outstanding bond issues . . . R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., plans to enter capital market for long-term debenture borrowing of about 20 million dollars, most of which will go for modernizing its main store and expanding operations in new stores in other cities . . . Business failures in week ended October 9 declined to 69 compared with 81 in preceding week . . . Sharp & Dohme, Inc., has arranged eight-million-dollar loan with two insurance firms . . . National Pressure Cooker Co. has begun three-million expansion program with acquisition of former ordnance plant at Eau Claire, Wis. . . . Steel production in United States this year will equal 59 per cent of world's supply, a percentage rise of 21 points in a 10-year period . . .

EARNINGS: Caterpillar Tractor Co. reports for first nine months of 1947 net profit of $5,376,178, or $2.85 a share, compared with $4,394,537 or $2.33 a share in same 1946 period. Other earnings statements included:

One on the Aisle—

A Courageous Picture

But 'Crossfire' Has Some Flaws

By Richard L. Coe

KEITH'S "CROSSFIRE" is an exceptional melodrama because it bases its villainy on senseless hatred. Its theme is anti-Semitism, which it states with real courage. It is finely acted and its lines have a rough reality. On the whole it is an absorbing picture.

The point is certainly well taken, but one can't help regretting several aspects of the film—quite extraneous really—which make it more earnest than wise, which, considering the superb film it might have been, is too bad.

Some soldiers in a bar pick up with a chap named Samuels and his girl. They go back to Samuels' apartment where one of them, Montgomery, murders Samuels in the heat of anti-Jewish passion. He covers his tracks by directing suspicion against one of the other soldiers. They'd all been drinking and Montgomery incriminates Mitch, whose only alibi threatens his marital life. But by morning the police inspector, finding no motive for Mitch to murder Samuels, realizes that only Montgomery's innate anti-Jewish prejudice could have spewed out such violence.

The film is an hour and a half long and suffers from padding its essential theme. A good deal of time is directed to the plight of Mitch. After leaving the apartment, he had picked up with an unlikely trollop (he is described by his pals as a sensitive chap who would hardly have been so quickly entranced by the sulky blonde we see, however physical she may be). This puts him on the spot with his wife, a familiar film situation which could well have been omitted here.

"CROSSFIRE." RKO-Radio release, presented by Dore Schary, produced by Adrian Scott. Screenplay by John Paxton from "The Brick Foxhole," a novel by Richard Brooks. Directed by Edward Dmytryk. At Keith's.

THE CAST

Keeley	Robert Mitchum

Ginny	Gloria Grahame
The Man	Paul Kelly

Mitchell	George Cooper

Miss Lewis	Marlo Dwyer

Poor Legal Aspect

And murder is hardly the charge which would make the men behave toward the law as they do. They never really help the law in its effort to find the murderer. The most responsible soldier of the lot attempts to handle things in his own way; another runs away from the police in a mild hotel skirmish. Perhaps the screen writer's idea is to show that rough and tumble Army guys would do just this; if so, the essential story of the murderer's motive becomes less than the anti-Semitic's story this is supposed to be.

Nor is the law effectively portrayed. There is one of those scenes in a private apartment between two people in conversation—no violence has taken place—in which the police inspector enters without a warrant and proceeds to ask questions he has no legal right to ask. In the usual claptrap mystery film one is accustomed to ignore this gross impropriety, but in a film which purports to realism and an eminently sensible theme, it is curiously cheap and disturbing.

Ryan's Portrayal Excellent

Naturally, Producer Dore Schary, Scenarist John Paxton and Director Edward Dmytryk had no intention of introducing these extraneous questions in an audience mind. They undoubtedly have as much respect for the law as they should have. But they don't give that impression, and by introducing such situations they both overdraw their story and miss scenes which might have given us more of Montgomery.

Robert Ryan plays this part finely, an ignorant roughneck who looks like an acceptable human being until you get to know him. His fellows, the picture suggests, don't like him, but why we are told very little. For the story is about Montgomery, not about Mitch and his troubles (human though they are). How did Montgomery behave when he was alone after the murder? What in his past had made him so ignorant? Such scenes would have been infinitely difficult to frame, but they are definitely a part of "Crossfire" that is missing.

But it is an exceptional film. Unlike so many, many pictures, it begins with an idea. And it has the courage and vitality to see it through.

The story, by the way, stems from Richard Brooks' novel, "The Brick Foxhole," in which the murder motive was different; the insertion of the anti-Semitic motive has been well done, and one only hopes that further films on the theme will be as honest.

Also on Keith's screen is "Power Behind the Nation," the short sponsored by the Eric Johnston Office, and a Walt Disney cartoon with some amusingly odd views of Donald Duck, "Brutal Beetle."

TOMORROW: Gene Krupa's appearances on the Capitol stage always lure escape from the truant officer. Richard L. Coe will report on the drummerman's reception.

No Quarrels Yet, Boasts Shirley

Hollywood.—Shirley Temple and John Agar have been married two years and have yet to quarrel, they said while filming "War Party," an Argosy Picture for RKO Radio release.

Nearest approach to disagreement came when Shirley faced becoming a golf widow. A compromise stipulating no golf on Sundays surmounted that obstacle.

"John and I believe in a community of interest," Shirley says, with her husband adding, "that's why I gave up business for acting—so we would have more in common."

Among other things to which they attribute their marital success is their domesticity, their be-kind-to-in-laws rule and the fact that Jack is boss of the house.

'Sainted Sisters' In Production

Hollywood.—Five top stars—Veronica Lake, Joan Caulfield, Barry Fitzgerald, Sterling Hayden and William Demarest—will head the outstanding cast of Paramount's "The Sainted Sisters," which goes in production as one of the most important productions for fall filming, the studio announced recently.

William D. Russell, who directed Miss Caulfield in the current hit "Dear Ruth," with William Holden, has been chosen to direct "The Sainted Sisters," romantic comedy of two confidence girls who are forced to hide out in a Maine hamlet.

Miss Lake and Miss Caulfield, of course, play the roles of "the sisters."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Anti-Trust Wrangle Draws Best Talent

By Drew Pearson

For weeks the most important antitrust suit in the country has been jockeyed back and forth between the highest-powered array of legal talent Wall Street can muster and the antitrust division of the Justice Department. Issue at stake has been two-fold:

Berge

1. Whether the big investment bankers can button up stock and bond floatations among their own favorites without letting outside bankers come in on the gravy.

2. Whether two big Wall Street firms, formerly run by two members of the Truman Cabinet (Secretary of Commerce Harriman and Secretary of Defense Forrestal) could pull enough weight to call off the antitrust action.

Yesterday the cream of Wall Street's legal brains came down to Washington for another and perhaps final conference. They were:

John Foster Dulles' firm of Sullivan & Cromwell, representing Blyth & Co., first Boston Corp., Lehman Bros. and Goldman Sachs & Co.

John W. Davis' firm of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Sunderland and Kiendl, representing J. P. Morgan & Co., Harriman Ripley & Co., and Smith, Barney & Co.

John J. McCloy's firm of Cravath, Swaine & Moore, representing Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

John Cahill's firm of Wright, Gordon, Zachry, Parlin & Cahill, representing Dillon, Read & Co.

Cahill, former United States district attorney in New York and onetime new dealer, has taken the lead among the defense attorneys, and for a time it looked as if he had succeeded in sidetracking the case.

Actually the Justice Department began working on the case two years ago and was all set for prosecution last February. For months a grand jury has been sitting, and courthouse rumor had it that jurors were all set to bring a criminal indictment.

Mysterious Slowdown

Last spring, however, Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, who had worked up the case, resigned. Succeeding him in charge of antitrust came John Sonnett, aide to Secertary Forrestal during the war and former assistant to John Cahill, now defending the Forrestal banking firm.

Suddenly prosecution of the Wall Street moguls was held up. For weeks it dragged along. Nothing happened. Sonnett is an A-1 lawyer, did a great job when it came to stopping John L. Lewis. But when it came to going after Wall Street and the old Forrestal banking firm, Sonnett's stock reply was: "I'm studying the case."

Finally, Wall Street passed out word that a compromise was in the works, that the Justice Department would call off the case in favor of a consent decree.

At this point, however, the Wall Streeters made a serious error. They pulled a refinancing deal for the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co., and in doing so followed their usual practice of relegating local Ohio bankers to a third-rate cut of the financial pie. This brought storms of protest from the Midwest. Also it brought the whole business before President Truman himself.

Mr. Truman has had a long and consistent record, both in the Senate and White House, for enforcing the antitrust laws. So what the Wall Street lawyers didn't know, when they negotiated with the anti-trust division yesterday, was that President Truman had sent word over to the Justice Department intimating that he wanted some action.

It now looks, therefore, as though the antitrust case against the big investment houses—including the former firms of two Cabinet members—will go forward about the end of this month.

Bus-Riding Admiral

This column has exposed certain brass hats for making undue use of Army-Navy airplanes on personal junkets. It's a pleasure, therefore, to report on the activities of one admiral, Frank D. Wagner, chief of naval war training, who saves the taxpayers money by riding in a bus.

The Pensacola News-Journal staged a banquet for Florida's Gov. Millard Caldwell and invited to it Admiral Wagner, together with three high-ranking naval officers from the Navy's nearby airbase at Elgin, Fla.

At first it was expected that the admiral and his party would fly the 40 miles to Pensacola by Navy plane. But when Admiral Wagner heard that a chartered bus was bringing some other passengers, he telephoned Braden Ball, editor of the News-Journal, and asked if he could get seats for himself and staff in the bus.

So, it's a pleasure to report that the Navy has a bus-riding, money-saving admiral, and a mighty fine admiral at that.

Publicity Firm Says It's Paid To Boost 'Taft-Reuther' Slate

Chicago, Oct. 15 (AP)—A Chicago publicity firm today issued a statement by what it termed "a group of responsible, civic-spirited citizens" proposing nomination of Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and Walter P. Reuther, CIO union leader, for president and vice president on the Republican ticket.

P. H. Morris, president of P. H. Morris and Associates, said his clients had declined to permit him to make public their identities, but that their names would be announced next week.

Announcement of the proposal brought a peppery blast from Reuther, attending the CIO national convention in Boston, who assailed the plan as "part of a smear campaign," and said:

"I expressed my opinion of Taft and his candidacy at the CIO convention here yesterday when I said I would see him in hell before I would see him in the White House. That statement still stands."

Taft declined comment on either the Chicago proposal or Reuther's statement.

Morris said backers of the plan were "all Chicago business and professional men, not one of whom is connected with the labor movement in any way."

Reuther's statement said the proposal was "another movement by my political opponents in an effort to win votes for themselves at our UAW convention." Reuther is president of the CIO United Auto Workers.

Morris said the program was instituted because the group retaining him felt "labor and management must get together" and thought that if the next GOP conveniton "produces a typical Republican ticket, we'll certainly have a war."

Army Barracks Wrecked by Hurricane

BIG WIND HITS GEORGIA—Above are some of the Army barracks at Chatham Field at Savannah, Ga., which were wrecked when a hurricane with winds up to 95 miles an hour ripped the Georgia coast. Hurricane warnings were posted along a 300-mile stretch from Wilmington, N. C., to St. Augustine, Fla.

Storm Leaves Wide Damage At Savannah

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 15 (AP).—A violent Atlantic hurricane moved westward across south Georgia today after raking Savannah with 80- to 100-mile winds and beating the Georgia-Carolina coast with storm tides and mountainous waves.

Extensive property damage was reported although much of it was relatively minor. Thousands of trees were uprooted and strewn across highways. Communications lines were badly disrupted. The greater part of the blow spent itself, however, on unpopulated marshlands of the Georgia coast.

Only one casualty was reported, a man being crushed to death by a falling tree near Charleston, S. C.

Church Blown Down

Fire sirens wailed all night on exposed Tybee Island, off Savannah, and most residents of Savannah Beach had time to seek safety on the mainland before water covered the connecting causeway. The Red Cross reported more than 1000 persons took shelter in Savannah's city hall. Countless others jammed themselves in neighborhood schoolhouses.

Two cabin cruisers were left atop the causeway leading to Tybee Island when waters receded. Fro mthe island itself came reports that Trinity Church was blown down and many homes severely damaged. Most of the buildings at Seafold Field, on nearby Wilmington Island, were flattened. Several planes were demolished.

Savannah suffered heavily from smashed windows, and many streets in the downtown business section crunched underfoot with broken glass. A large bakery at the edge of town had its roof torn off.

Highest tides in history inundated Morehead City, N. C.

Waves vaulted the seawall at Charleston Harbor, backing up the tide in storm sewers and flooding some portions of the famous old Battery section.

Chatham and Hunter airfields, near Savannah, were beaten up by the storm, and some hangars and planes were damaged.

Most coastal communities were littered with debris.

Gas Tanks Explode On Savannah Dock

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 15 (INS).—Two butane gas tanks exploded this afternoon at the Atlantic Coast docks. Ships tied along the already damaged waterfront were endangered by flames before firemen could bring the blaze under control. The entire dock area remained closed off tonight because of gas fumes.

Chapman Aids Man Accused

Undersecretary of Interior Oscar L. Chapman yesterday appeared as a defense witness for Paul Toneman, convicted swindler, now on trial in District Court on charges of using the mails to defraud.

Chapman testified that he "referred" Toneman to other Government officials when Toneman sought aid in a matter "having to do with surplus property." Chapman said he had been acquainted with the defendant for 12 years.

Toneman was accused of having defrauded Edward Hartford, secretary-treasurer of the Postal Export Co. of Los Angeles of $2050 on a promise of using alleged Washington connections to obtain for Hartford an export license for Chins.

Part of the money, Hartford said, was sent to Toneman when the latter said he needed it to buy a car for an unidentified Government official as a Christmas gift last December.

Real Estate Man's License Is Revoked

The District Real Estate Commission announced yesterday it had revoked the 1947 real estate broker's license of I. Russell Bowen, 5131 Columbia Pike, Arlington, and denied his application for a 1948 license.

The commission reported it found that Bowen had made "substantial misrepresentations" in the sale here of two properties in Prince William County and Frederick and Shenandoah Counties, Va.

The commission also suspended for one month the real estate broker's license of D. Patrick Williams of 3112 11th st. nw., accused of arranging sale of a property to gain profit for himself at the expense of the man he represented.

Lumber Deal Involved

Charges against Bowen resulted from sale of the Virginia properties to Raymond and Ethel Mintz, of 1900 F st. nw.

The Real Estate Commission found there was no "appreciable amount" of approximately 1,250,000 board feet of timber that Bowen said was on the properties.

Instead of 45,000 to 57,000 cords of wood claimed by Bowen, there were only about 11,000 cords on the two pieces of land, the commission found.

Williams, acting as agent for Leonard Z. Johnson, arranged to sell premises in the 900 block of Westminster st. nw. to Mary E. Hill for $14,000, and received a $1000 deposit on the sale, the commission revealed.

But instead of completing the sale, he arranged for Johnson to sell the property to Louise T. Butler (Williams' daughter-in-law) for $12,500 and collected a $625 broker's commission.

The daughter-in-law then transferred the property to Mary Hill. The commission called these actions "fraudulent dealings" and said Williams had demonstrated "unworthiness" to act as a broker.

Hearing Set Oct. 20

Suspension of only one month was ordered in view of Williams' four years as a licensed broker without "justifiable complaint," the commission said.

Public hearing on applications by Jay Realty Company, 1427 1 st. nw., and Bernice Jay, president and treasurer, for real estate and business chance broker's license will be heard October 29, the commission announced.

Blue Plate Special

TEXAS DEPT.—The newest suspicion is that the only college football team now belonging in the same league with the Michigan and Notre Dame powerhouses is Texas U. Down in Texas they're calling the Longhorns the invincibles and that's a pretty strong word, but perhaps they're not overstating it.

POVICH

Texas warmed up in its opening game with a 33-0 win over Texas Tech and then slapped down what was supposed to be a good Oregon team, 38-13. The next thing they did was to deflate North Carolina's Sugar Bowl contenders, including Charley Justice, 34-0. Oklahoma was a 34-14 push-over last Saturday.

What makes it more interesting is the fact that Texas is operating with a rookie head coach, Blair Cherry. He was Dana X. Bible's assistant last year, and Texas' great success this season may be no coincidence. Bible and Cherry introduced something new last season. They split their squad. Bible coached two teams in the single wing. Cherry coached two teams in the T-formation.

It's Cherry's T-formation sophomores of last year, plus Quarterback Bobby Layne and a few other of Bible's 1946 regulars, who are making Texas go. Thus far it's a sensational transposition from the single wing to the T . . . as in Texas.

VEECK DEPT.—Until 10 days ago, President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians probably had better public relations than any big league club owner. He captivated Cleveland fans with his open-handed dealings, and concern for their interest in the club. And then came l'affaire Boudreau.

Veeck wanted to trade Boudreau to St. Louis for Shortstop Vernon Stephens and other players, and probably still does. But in his enthusiasm to learn the reaction of Cleveland fans, he made a homeward dash from the World Series to sample public opinion personally, and was snowed down by the furore against the deal.

Right now, he's trying to answer 4000 letters from Cleveland fans protesting the proposed trade. But Veeck says he won't necessarily be dissuaded if he thinks the deal will help the club. He may still make it, but Cleveland fans won't like it. Many an older club owner could have told Veeck it's not good public relations to take the customers too far into your confidences.

BROOKLYN DEPT.—The talk now is that Brooklyn's artless Dodgers of the All-America Conference may fold, and small wonder. Brooklyn has won only one of its six games thus far, and, more seriously, hasn't been drawing at Ebbetts Field. The club lost $100,000 last season, and could lose more than that this year.

It's nothing for the rival National Football League to point a scorning finger at, however. The NFL could never make football go in Brooklyn, either, before Dan Topping jumped his franchise to New York. Without a winner, Brooklyn has been traditionally a poor football town.

When the AAC moved into Brooklyn, there was high suspicion it would be a weak member of the conference. It was headed by Bill Cox, who was heaved out of baseball by the late Judge Landis on charges of betting on ball games. The Dodgers sold most of their season tickets for 1947 on the basis of displaying the great Glenn Dobbs in their backfield. After one game, Dobbs was sold to Los Angeles, reportedly for $70,000. That left the Dodgers without an ace passer, but the fans took over the kicking.

CROWD DEPT.—Otherwise, the All America Conference is doing all right—outdrawing the 44-year-old National Football League, in fact. After 26 league games, the AAC is averaging 37,976 fans per contest, a figure that is 40 per cent higher than the crowd figures at this point last year.

The New York Yankees in seven games have played to 358,180 fans, only 10,000 fewer than they showed to in their complete 14-game schedule of last year. In four home games, Buffalo has drawn 129,477, more than its complete attendance for 1946. Cleveland is ahead of the pace that set a pro football attendance record last year. Los Angeles, after only three games, has exceeded its total for 1946, and San Francisco lacks only 20,000 of tying its 1946 aggregate.

Financially, the All America Conference is over the hump. The Baltimore owners, who expected to lose $60,000 this year, are actually making money. Despite the NFL's scorn for the Conference, there are two big leagues in pro football, and the AAC may be the bigger.

Pick the Grid Winners

There will be six winners in all. At the end of the series of contests, each winner will receive two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 29. The entire party of twelve (12) persons will be guests of The Washington Post on an all-expenses-paid trip to Philadelphia for the big game.

Navy's Williams Out for Rest of Year

Miller, Gott Win First Week's Grid Contest

PICKING THE WINNERS—This picture of girls checking some of the 20,000 entries in the first week of The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winner football contest gives you an idea of the tremendous interest fans are showing in the contest

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Pair Best Field Of 20,000 Entries

Ralph I. Miller, Rockville, Md., and Charles M. Gott, 485 E st. sw., are cowinners of the first week of the Pick-the-Winner football contest sponsored by The Washington Post.

Of 20,000 entries, Miller and Gott had the highest grade. Each missed only 2 of the 20 games listed for picking the winners.

In the one game on which a score was predicted, Navy vs. Duke, Miller and Gott picked half of the result correctly. Navy and Duke played a 14-14 tie. Miller predicted a Navy victory, 20-14, and Gott a Duke win, 20-14.

No entrant had a perfect grade. Sixteen, including Miller and Gott, picked all but two winners. Accuracy with which Miller and Gott predicted half of the Navy-Duke score enabled them to become winners.

The two games missed by Miller were George Washington vs. Washington and Lee, and Wake Forest vs. North Carolina. Miller picked G. W. and North Carolina, Gott missed on Georgetown-St. Louis and Georgia-Kentucky games, picking Georgetown and Georgia.

Miller and Gott will receive four tickets each to the Columbia-Pennsylvania game Saturday as well as an all-expense-paid trip to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 29.

You May Enter Contest Any Time

Harriett Jewel, 49 Franklin st., Annapolis, Md., yesterday asked a question which may be uppermost in the minds of many of you fans about the Pick-the-Winner football contest.

"By entering the contest the second week after missing the first week, is it possible for me to continue with the rest of the contest?" she asked.

The answer to one and all is this: You are eligible on a week-by-week basis. If you miss one week, enter the contest the next week.

Star Back Broke Ankle Against Duke

Annapolis, Oct. 15.—Navy's football forces today suffered a heavy blow in preparation for Saturday's clash with Cornell in Ithaca, N. Y., when Halfback Pete Williams was declared out for the season.

Williams

Williams, carried from the field in the fourth period of the Duke game last week, was found to have a fractured ankle after it was thought he had merely suffered a sprain. The ankle was X-rayed Tuesday, revealing the break.

It was a bitter announcement for Coach Tom Hamilton to make. Williams was one of his few seasoned and dependable backfield men. Operating as left halfback in the Middies' T-formation, Pete was considered the team's second best ball carrier, an excellent climax runner, and a hawk on pass defense.

Williams was injured in the closing minutes of last Saturday's 14-14 deadlock as he grabbed a Duke fumble and attempted a runback. He was tackled sharply, his foot apparently being twisted in the play.

Williams, a 20-year-old native of Miami, Fla., was a third-year man on the Navy squad.

Cornell Loses Chollet, Ace Back, For Season

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 15 (AP).—Hillery Chollet of New Orleans, backfield star of the Cornell University football team last year, is through for the season as the result of a leg injury.

Confined to the university infirmary for treatment of a blood clot in his left leg, the 185-pound halfback planned to withdraw from the university when released. Whether he will enroll next term or wait until next fall depends on the result of treatment to his injured leg, Chollet said.

Chollet was injured in preseason practice, preventing his appearance in any games this season. The injury also may keep him from playing basketball, another sport in which he performed for the Big Red.

League Gives Sammy Baugh Another Mark

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

As though he didn't hold enogh records already, the National Football League yesterday made htree corrections in its books to give Slingin' Sammy Baugh the high mark for most complete passes in a single season.

The latest record credited to the tall Redskin ace resulted from the league's decision to include the 1943 Eastern Division playoff game with the New York Giants in the regular season totals. Baugh's 149 completions that year thus earns the record previously held by Cecil Isbell on his 146 completions in 1942.

Other correction by NFL headquarters, all on the '43 playoff game, improved Sammy's stading but failed to account for records. His touchdown total that year was boosted to 24, highest of his 11 years in professional football, and his yards-gained-passing mark went to 1953 that season.

Baugh, leading both divisions of the loop in passing after three 1947 games, is in the position of setting a record every time he throws or completes a pass, scores a touchdown or has a pass intercepted. His records at the start of this season were for most passes attempted (1739), most completed (992), best percentage for a season and a lifetime (.703 and .570), most yardage gained in a lifetime (12,569), most touchdown passes in a lifetime (103), and most passes intercepted (124).

As the Redskins braced for a meeting with the Green Bay Packers in Milwaukee Sunday, several other players shared in the weekly compilation of figures. Fullback Sal Rosato was third in the East high in total yards gained with 130, Bob Nussbaumer, Hugh Taylor and Eddie Saenz were second, third and fourth, respectively, in the pass catching department, Dick Poillon and Taylor led Eastern scorers with 25 and 24 points, and Saenz was best of the kickoff returners with 356 yards in nine times for an average of 39.6.

The top team statistically is the Chicago Cardinals, undefeated leaders of the Western Division, who pace both sections in punting, and top the West with the least yards yielded, most first downs and most points.

Texas-Oklahoma Shift Debated

Dallas, Oct. 15 (AP).—Dallas sports leaders expressed concern today over a momement by the University of Oklahoma to take the annual football game with the University of Texas away from Dallas as an aftermath of last Saturday's bottle throwing, fan fighting and official-baiting incidents in the Cotton Bowl.

Dr. George L. Cross, president of Oklahoma, who previously had suggested that the game be placed on a home-and-home basis as the result of crowded hotel conditions in Dallas, last night said: "I don't see how we can go back to Dallas now," in referring to the disorders at Saturday's game.

At Austin, D. X. Bible, athletic director of the University of Texas, urged both schools to make peace and forget the disputes which arose Saturday.

Rollers, Southeast In Feature Tilt

The outstanding Metropolitan Football League 160-pound game of early season will be offered on Hearst Playground Sunday when Riverside Rollers, leader of the Eastern Division, opposes Southeast A. C., pacing the Western Division.

Both teams have won four games to date, and the Rollers have been unscored on.

Tulsa, in Good Shape, Doesn't Take Georgetown Lightly

By B. A. Bridgewater
Tulsa World Sports Reporter

Tulsa, Okla., Oct. 15.—Except for the absence of Left Halfback Paul Barry, their hardest running back, the University of Tulsa football team will be in tiptop condition physically for its intersectional clash with Georgetown of Washington here Saturday.

Barry reinjured a knee in hte Drake game two weeks ago and missed last Saturday's brush with Texas Tech., but the rest of the Hurricanes came through that bruising engagement with nothing more than the usual bumps and bruises.

Coach J. O. (Buddy) Brothers has been driving his team hard in practice this week with plenty of emphasis on offense. The Hurricanes completed only tw opasses out of 13 thrown against Texas Tech and failed twice to score within the Red Raider's 20-yard line, once recahing the 2. So Brothers has every reason to concentrate on sharpening his team's offense.

Losing Game Best

Brothers was not particularly disappointed in his team's showing in the losing battle with Texas Tech. He thought Tulsa played its best game of the year in defeat. Previously Tulsa had beaten West Texas State in the rain 26-13, and had nosed out Drake, 21-14, but had looked dull in both contests.

Tulsa has a team built around Hardy Brown, senior fullback and line backer de luxe, and a seasoned line that is very strong from tackle to tackle. It is largely the same team that lost only one game in 1946, to Detroit, 20-14, except for the absence of Clyde LeForce, brilliant T-formation quarterback, lost through graduation.

Jim Finks, a fine passer, has taken over LeForce's assignment in the T-formation backfield—and the fact that Finks can hit the target is the one angle that favors Tulsa in the brush with the Hoyas. Finks is a much better passer than this bad game would indicate and Tulsa's scouts have advised that if Georgetown is to be handled it must be through the air. The bristling Hoyas line looks too formidable for running, especially with Barry out of the picture.

One Good Pass

But on last week's aerial record Tulsa's prospects are far from bright. Finks completed only one toss out of 11. Tulsa's other completion being by Hardy Brown.

In today's scrimmage the Tulsa Freshmen were running through the varsity line with consistency that had the Hurricant mentors badly worried. Tulsa's forwards have been below expectations in every game this fall and unless the line plays a different brand of football Saturday, Georgetown probably will provide another "upset" to the season's rapidly growing list.

The odds-makers had Tulsa a two-touchdown favorite over the Easterners.

Myatt to Manage Nats' 'Nooga Farm

Chattanooga, Tenn., Oct. 15 (AP).—George Myatt, former infielder for Jersey City, the New York Giants and the Washington Senators has been signed as playing manager of the Chattanooga baseball club, President Joe Engel announced today.

Myatt replaces Bert Niehoff, who has not announced his future plans. It is Myatt's first managerial post.

Tarheels Sure Justice Is OK

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 15 (AP).—Chancellor R. B. House of the University of North Carolina expressed confidence today that the Southern Conference executive committee would uphold the eligibility of Charlie Justice to play football.

House's comment, the first to come from any university official since the eligibility of the flashy Tarheel back was questioned last week, was made in a statement issued here.

The executive committee is scheduled to meet in Durham Saturday.

Justice's status was challenged after a magazine published a story reporting that he signed a contract with the Philadelphia Eagles of the National (pro) Football League while he was in the Navy. The Eagles said the football star signed a contract but it was subsequently invalidated by Elmer Layden, then pro commissioner.

Great Pacer Critically Ill

Hanover, Pa., Oct. 15 (AP).—The Hanover Shoe Farms reported today that its great pacer Billy Direct, holder of two world record pacing titles, is critically ill with a heart condition, and expressed doubt the horse "would ever be able to sire again."

James C. Overbaugh, an official at the farms, said the horse has been suffering for several months from what he described as an "athletes heart."

What a Diet!

Sylph-Like Haight Bounces (On Heels) During Walk

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

REALLY I don't see why I will have to go on with this "For Men Only" diet after the 10 days end. Tell the truth I've been trying to figure a way I can look better and still eat.

Yesterday, I ran smack into an idea—and no wise cracks about what a crash that was.

I went downtown to buy a pair of shoes and I wore them home. Mindful of Lucia Brown's instructions, a brisk morning walk—I mushed along F st. and met a friend.

"Looks as if you're getting the most of the diet," he said, giving me the twice over. "I saw you coming down the street, you were bouncing along with a light step."

He didn't know my shoes had rubber soles thicker than a war surplus bargain hunter's dream.

I FIGURED if I could fool him with so little added equipment, it might be a good idea to go all the way. With my rubber-soled shoes for the springy step, all I needed was a small outboard motor to increase my speed and I'd look normal.

The question of my figure could be solved, too. To hide my three chins I could wear a turtle-neck sweater. If I carried a bunch of flowers, maybe people would think it was a potted plant, if you know what I mean.

The women get away with it, so I guess I could buy a four-way stretch. Of course, I wouldn't need a—

I guess this comparison should stop. After all, this is a family newspaper and if I don't watch out I will be on a diet for a brand new reason—beyond my control.

Brooks Deal Durocher Out Of Series Cash

Cincinnati, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers did not deal in Leo Durocher, their former manager, for a share of the World Series' pot.

His name is missing from the lists of players sharing in World Series receipts announced today by Walter Mulbry, secretary-treasurer of Baseball.

Although Durocher was suspended for the 1947 season by Commissioner A. B. Chandler last April, there was some speculation Durocher might be voted a cut of the melon.

Each full share was $5,830.03 for the champion New York Yankees and $4,081.18 for the Dodgers who were defeated in the seven-game fall classic. Twenty seven Yankees and 32 Dodgers got full shares.

A full share for St. Louis, runner-up in the National League pennant race, amounted to $1,173.42 and for Detroit, second-place team in the American, it was $1,165.90.

As third placers, a full share for Boston in the National was $747.99, for Boston in the American, $715.02. For fourth place, the full share was $342.83 for New York in the National and $391.81 for Cleveland in the American.

Browns Send Dean To Toledo Farm

St. Louis, Oct. 14 (AP).—Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, who pitched four scoreless innings for the St. Louis Browns in his only mound appearance in 1947, has been released outright to the Toledo Club in the American Association as the first step toward getting back to the broadcasting booth.

The Brownie farm club will, in turn, have to get waivers on Dean in the American Association to complete his second retirement from active baseball. He went on the voluntarily retired list in 1940 when he was with the Chicago Cubs.

Neither Dean nor DeWitt has said what plans the club may have for the former St. Louis Cardinal star in regard to sportscasting next year. Dean broadcast all Brownie games for St. Louis listeners this year, except the one in which he pitched.

Veeck Won't Sell Boudreau to Tigers

Cleveland, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Bill Veeck, president of the Cleveland Indians, today disclaimed any knowledge of an invitation extended to Billy Evans of Detroit, who was ready and eager to come here for the purpose of obtaining Indian Shortstop-Manager Lou Boudreau.

Veeck insisted he had not talked with Evans, Tiger general manager ,and added he would "never sell Boudreau to Detroit anyway."

After denying knowledge of the invitation, Veeck said. "I'll be glad to talk with Evans though, but it can't be about Boudreau. I said before that I wouldn't trade Lou to Detroit and it still holds."

Sundra Sues Browns Under GI-Pay Bill

St. Louis, Oct. 15 (AP).—Steve Sundra, former Browns pitcher, filed suit in Federal court here today against the St. Louis American League Baseball club asking for $5400 alleged to be due him and for restoration of his job under the Army reserve and retired personnel service law of 1940.

He alleged he was entitled to pay under an $8000 contract signed for one year in February, 1946, under which he worked with the club in spring training until released May 28 of that year.

He pitched for the Browns from May 1942 until May 1944 when he went into the service, remaining until the end of hostilities. He charged he was released from his job without cause.

Navy Wins in Soccer

Poole, Garza Top Catchers

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).Barney Poole, of the pass-catching Mississippi Pooles, and Dan Garza of Oregon University deserve equal billing among the Nation's young men who make a specialty of being on the receiving end of footballs thrown by their more glamorized team mates.

Whether one of them outranks the other in this vital but underemphasized function depends upon the viewpoint. Poole has caught more passes than any other player for a major school—18—but Garza has galloped over more ground than any of his rivals after taking his tosses—257 yards.

As the Oregon star has snared only 11 passes in three games, he has posted a phenomenal average of better than 23 yards for each and every throw he has gathered in. A week ago he wasn't even listed among the country's 16 leaders, but he came up with a rush as Oregon bowed to UCLA, 24-7.

Statistics released by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau showed six players tied for second place in number of passes received, each with 12. George Broadnax of Georgia Tech topped this group in yards gained, with 188 in three games. Dan Edwards of Georgia had snagged three scoring passes to tie Poole in that department.

Fred Wendt of the Texas Miners got off a succession of his typical soaring boots last Saturday to take over the leadership among the punters with an average of 48.9 yards from scrimmage. He was closely pressed by Joe Congdon of Brown, 48.3, with Charlie Justice of North Carolina third at 46.8.

The top safety man in the country at this stage of the season is Lindy Berry of Texas Christian, who has run back 20 punts a total of 286 yards.

Babe's 150 Paces Field

Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 15 (AP).—Mildred (Babe) Zaharias of Denver led at the halfway mark of medal play in the two-division Hard-scrabble women's open golf tournament here today with 150 after 36 holes.

Mrs. Zaharias shot a 74 today to add to the 76 she scored yesterday on the first 18 holes.

Defending Champion Betty Jameson of San Antonio established a new woman's course record with a six-under-par 73 to lift herself from sixth place to third place in the nine-entrant madel play. Added to her 79 of yesterday, today's round gave her a 152.

In second place between Mrs. Zaharias and Miss Jameson was Patty Berg of Minneapolis, whose 74 today made her 36-hole total 151.

Montgomery Plans Tuneup Bouts

Philadelphia, Oct. 15 (AP).—Bob Montgomery, former lightweight king in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, will start training for a comeback next Wednesday at Pleasantville, N. J.

The Bobcat has been resting since August 4 when he was knocked out by Ike Williams of Trenton, N. J., in a battle for the undisputed lightweight championship.

Manager Joe Gramby said Montgomery will return to the ring late next month and engage in several tuneups for his title rematch with Williams at Madison Square Garden January 16.

Jockey Injured In Race Spill

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Jockey John Magee, a 34-year-old veteran rider from Kildare, Ireland, suffered possible rib fractures today when he was thrown from his mount, Middle River, during the running of the second race on the final day's program of the United Hunts meeting at Belmont Park. He was taken to a hospital.

Middle River, the 11 to 20 favorite, and Quesada both fell on the seventh jump, the latter going down first and Middle River piling over him. The two horses were battling for the lead. Frank Adams was resting well in a hospital after his injury yesterday. Adams' right arm was fractured and he also suffered head injuries.

The Doge, Coincidence Score Upsets in Split Laurel Feature

Bill Bennings

At Laurel—

Dear Folks:

Betting here is going up, the wagering nearing the million mark daily is now ahead of last year. Jockey Sammy Palumbo and Patsy Grant, big shots on the half-milers, have given up here and returned to Charles Town, where they make their homes with their families. Palumbo made just about every mistake in the book while riding Kitty Kilts here last Saturday. However, he's still the "King of the half-milers" in my opinion. By the way, I'm told the sale of the Charles Town track is all over but the shouting. Maryland fans will have to wait for a look-see at the Ridgewood Stable's Double Jay, the New Jersey handicap star. He was scratched out of yesterday's $10,000 added, The Laurel, because Trainer C. M. Feltner decided to ship the three-year-old to Jamaica for the $25,000 Roamer Handicap on Saturday. The relaxation of the New York order banning shipment of horses into New York will have little effect on racing in Maryland. Many of the owners have already shipped here or to Pimlico. I still think the rule was a cute one in the first place. John Manfuso, Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association, tells me his group has sent a check for $1660 to the Swamp Fever Fund. See you on the Rail.—BILL.

12,500 See Thrillers in Both Races

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 15.—The thirteenth day of the meeting was unlucky for favorite players. They were polished off in the twin running of the $10,000 added The Laurel, featuring the midweek program before a crowd of 12,500. Victories in both divisions went to the high-weighted horses, perhaps shunned because of their 122-pound assignments.

Both races were thrillers and battles right into the wire.

The Pentagon Stable's The Doge won the first half under good handling by Jockey Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, Md. The Greentree Stable's Coincidence won the second half under a drive engineered by Jockey Ted Atkinson, who was making his first appearance of the season here.

The Doge, paying $17.20, led S. Greenfield's High Trend and the King Ranch's Flash Burn into the wire as the favorite players moaned, the heavily supported Shamrock Stable's Air Patrol being out of the money circle.

Coincidence came from behind to win going away from Christiana Stable's Alexis with the Brookfield Farms' Brookfield third. It was Brookfield who was given Codles of backing but he did save the show players.

In neither division was the time startling. The Doge, in winning the race for the second time (he beat Hasteville and Gay Bit in 1945), was clocked in 1:39 2/5 for the mile while Coincidence was timed in 1:38 4/5. The record for the race and also the track record is the 1:37 hung up by Jacola when she whipped Seabiscuit and The Chief in 1938.

Steeplechase racing for the season in Maryland opened on the down beat—three of the nine entries going on their respective heads.

The big crash of the race came at the thirteenth and final jump when the Mrs. Corliss Sullivan entry of Hemlock and Drift fell as a team while being head and head with Miss Dolly F. Von Stade's D'Artagnan who stayed up probably because he is a husky individual and named for one of the Three Musketeers.

With the heavily-backed Sullivan entry thus eliminated, D'Artagnon coasted into the wire ahead of Stephen C. Clark, jr.'s, Tacaro Sunted and Robert A. Chapman's Bailmeout.

'Gambler' Charges Heard At Trot Track Meeting

Baltimore, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission cut short today a hearing on a new harness track in Anne Arundel County after receiving a demand for an investigation of the sponsors but getting no response to its request for specific charges.

The application of the Severn Downs Trotting Association was the first of three heard by the Commission on Protests to applications for the 100 days of harness racing with pari-mutuel betting approved by the 1947 legislature.

Justin G. Buch, president of the Citizens Protective Association, appeared before Chairman Stuart S. Janney, Jr., and other commissioners to ask an investigation of stockholders in the Severn Association, declaring that "we don't want any more gamblers or racketeers" in Anne Arundel County.

Janney asked Buch to be more specific in his charges and also to connect them with the group seeking the $750,000 track. The chairman read names from the list of applicants, asked Buch for his comment and received none.

Janney then declared the hearing at an end.

Opposition to establishment of a harness track on the grounds of the Pimlico Airport met objection from several Baltimore sources. A group led by Jerome Sloman argued, among other things, that the location was ideal for private flying and no other spot nearby could be used economically.

Buch in his appearance against the Severn application declared that he had "seen elected representative of of the county fraternize with a certain gambler who had served a term in the Atlanta penitentiary. It is logical to believe something is wrong with the organization."

Buch said it had been alleged that if the Severn license were granted there would be contributions to local campaign funds.

After reading the list of applicants, Janney asked for comment and Buch said he did not know many of them.

The chairman then said that "the only thing you are asking is something we have already done. I have named them and you have nothing to say against them. You have not said anytone connected with the track is associated with gamblers."

Bell to Captain W&L Saturday Against Virginia

Lexington, Va., Oct. 15.—Washington's Brian Bell, who started his football career at Western High, today was named captain of the Washington and Lee eleven as it prepped for Saturday's stand against potent Virginia at Charlottesville.

The combination halfback and fullback, leader in the W. and L. scoring department, will be leading the Generals against a buddy of his if the Cavaliers' Ray Brown is recovered from an early season injury enough to play.

Bell and Brown, schoolmates at Western, enrolled in Virginia together in 1944 and earned second-string end positions. Bell was called into active Navy duty shortly afterward, then switched to W. and L., alma mater of his father, when discharged from service in 1946.

Now weighing 15 pounds more than last year, Coach Art Lewis' prize ball lugger is apparently faster than last season. He'll have to be fast, the Generals' supporters agree, to lead his team to a triumph over a Cavalier squad which has routed three straight teams so far.

William and Mary's junior varsity eleven will meet the junior varsity of Georgetown University here Friday.

Georgia Schoolboy Dies of Grid Injury

Winder, Ga., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Ernest Davis, 16-year-old Winder High School football player who finished the game with Elberton High Friday night not knowing he had ruptured a large intestine in the first few minutes, died today in agony after an emergency operation failed to save his life.

Davis was injured while rushing an Elberton passer and was sidelined for only a few minutes. Though in pain, he begged Coach Red Boyd to permit him to return to the line-up with an assurance that he "felt fine." Winder lost, 32 to 6.

Tuition Fee Boost Given Approval of School Board

Increases Range From $15 in Night Classes to $230 For Cripples

Increased tuition rates for out-of-town students attending District public schools were approved yesterday by the Board of Education.

Increases ranged from $15 for night school pupils to as much as $230 for crippled children attending the Health School.

The Board announced new rates in a meeting which also saw:

A request by Board Member George E. C. Hayes for the board to determine its policy on whether mixed racial groups can meet in school buildings.

A demand by Adelbert W. Lee, another member of the board, that the board protest the use of "inferior materials" in new school buildings.

Corning Explains Rate

Tuition rates for out-of-town students were set at $343 for the teachers colleges, $194 for senior high students including veterans, $150 for junior high pupils, $250 for vocational students; $106 for elementary students, $26 for night school pupils, and $300 for children attending the crippled school.

Last year the rates were $300 for the teachers colleges, $160 for senior high, $110 for junior high, $170 for vocational schools, $70 for elementary schools, and $11 for night schools.

Crippled children from out-of-town last year paid the $70 set for elementary students.

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, told the board that the rate for these children should be increased to $300 because of the expense of providing them nursing care and lunch. Tuition in most cases, Dr. Corning said, is paid by the school district from which the child comes.

Under a ruling of Corporation Counsel Vernon West all non-resident students will have to pay tuition fees if they were not enrolled before July 25. Previously nonresident students whose parents were employed in the Federal or District Government or were in the armed forces attended school free.

Hayes requested a ruling on the Board of Education's racial policy after reading into the record correspondenceon recreational use of school buildings between the Rev. Stephen Spotiswood of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Milo F. Christiansen, superintendent of the Recreation Department.

Hayes said that if the board decided that its policy was different from that of the Recreation Department he would ask that permission for the Recreation Department to use school buildings be withdrawn.

The board referred the matter to its committee on community use of buildings and grounds.

Lee complained that "animals of the zoo are given more attention than our children" in the construction of buildings. He asked that Superintendent Corning give a full report at the next meeting on "why our children are being treated this way."

In other actions the board:

Appointed Ann Sparks, 15-year-old senior at Dunbar Hugh School, as commanding officer of Negro girl cadets. Miss Sparks, who lives at 410 E st. se., carries the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Agreed to permit the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Veterans Committee 20 minutes each to discuss the textbook "Building Citizenship" at the board's November 5 meeting.

Authorized the secretary to the board to sign an agreement under which Mary Arnold, 11-year-old girl who is almost totally blind and deaf, will go to school at the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind. Under the agreement the District will pay $600 for her tuition and the Family Service Association an equal sum.

Arnold Bus Fare Increases Defended in Reply to Protest

The Arnold Bus Line yesterday filed a three-point reply to the Arlington Public Utilities Commission, which has protested fare increases granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The bus line's reply, filed with the ICC by Attorney J. Nialan Beall, asked that the PUC petition for rate increase reconsideration be denied.

To a PUC demand that Arnold accounting practices be improved before any fare boosts are granted, the bus company reported that "objectionable practices of the past have no relationship to the revenue requirements for adequate service in the future."

The Arlington PUC also had objected to the ICC granting the increase before requiring the Arnold Lines to maintain "reasonable, adequate and efficient service" on its routes.

The reply declared the commission has "continuing statutory jurisdiction over the matter of adequate service and certainly nothing could be put into an order which would strengthen the already existing statutory jurisdiction."

The reply added that the PUC arguments were not helpful either to the commission or to the Arnold Lines in the face of its "huge deficit in operating expense and the lack of sufficient revenue to carry on."

The bus company made its third point in answering the PUC charge that the revenue increases, as granted by the ICCC were not equitably distributed between zones.

Arnold's Zone I took the heaviest percentage increase—from 5 to 10 cents cash fare—under the ICC order, the PUC charged in its petition. But Zone I riders "have at the same time been obtaining service at a rate which was already inequitable as to the riders in other zones," the bus company replied. Any attempt, the company's reply stated, to saddle other zones with a greater increase would only result in "greater inequities between zone fares."

The ICC has extended the effective date of the increases, which range from 5 to 10 cents per zone in cash, and from 2½ to 7½ cents in tokens, until next Tuesday.

Carlyn Owner Requests Rent Rise at Hearing

114 Tenants Charge Misrepresentation, Demand Decrease

District Rent Control Examiner Denis K. Lane yesterday held a hearing on a petition to raise rents 7½ per cent on all units of the Carlyn Apartments, 2500 Q st. nw.

Owner of the property, the Ring Management Co., based its request for an increase on the rise in maintenance and operating costs.

Operating expenses, real estate taxes and water rent cost the owners $140,527 in fiscal 1947 as compared to $118,815 in fiscal 1943, the petition claimed. The difference in operating costs can be made up by a flat 7½ per cent increase on all of the 271 units, according to the petition.

Attorneys Robert C. Handwerk and Jordan R. Bentley, representing 114 tenants, requested that rents be decreased.

The minimum services rendered by the owners have not measured up to those named in the rent schedules filed in 1942. Moreover, the size of the rooms in a number of apartments have been misrepresented, they maintained.

They argued that maintenance and operating expenses have not increased and that the income from the building far exceeds any such expenses.

Virginia Eases Closed Shop Rule

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—Virginia contractors or subcontractors who had closed shop labor contracts in force as of April 30, 1947, may bid on State construction jobs, Governor Tuck today advised the heads of State agencies and institutions.

In a memorandum to department heads, the Governor said the question had arisen over one section of the "right-to-work" bill enacted last January. This law prohibited the writing of any closed-shop contracts, or any contracts providing for maintenance of membership.

In a statement of policy last April on State construction work, the Governor called attention to this fact. Since a number of building trade unions had closed-shop contracts at the time, the Governor said the act would not apply to any contract in force on April 30, the effective date of the act.

Defends Handyman

Lawyer Has Wife Testify In Sex Trial

Attorney Francis X. Walsh put his own wife on the stand in Municipal Court yesterday to hammer home a point.

Walsh, who is defending Victor H. Redmond, 54, a restaurant handyman, of 1010 H st. ne., on a charge of indecent assault upon a 14-year-old girl, accused the girl's mother of being "vituperative" and said she came to court with a "vengeful purpose to give the defendant the works."

The attorney said the mother had been overheard in the courtroom instructing her daughter to remove her lipstick. He called his wife to the stand and she testified that she had heard this conversation.

The girl and her mother testified in the courtroom of Judge George D. Neilson that on August 19 while they were walking down the aisle in the Capitol Theater a man whom they identified as Redmond put one arm around the girl and fondled her with the other hand.

They said when they accused Redmond of the indecent assault, he arose from his seat and ran. They testified that he was finally caught by an usher and several theater patrons and taken to the theater office where he denied his guilt but pleaded with the mother not to press charges.

Walsh told the jury that Redmond is "a victim of sex hysteria which was sweeping Washington at the time." He said "the defendant is being persecuted as a result of publicity associated with sex offenses." He said if Redmond did anything it was "inadvertent and unintentional."

"This is a dirty charge," said Walsh. "The newspapers have been filled with stories so that it has almost reached the point where it is dangerous for men even to ride streetcars or buses where they run the risk of inadvertently touching a woman."

The jury which includes five women was excused until today when it is expected to return a verdict.

Zoning Body At Odds With McLean Plea

Advisory Council Opposes Gardens Bid for Extension Covering Cafeteria

The Zoning Advisory Council and the owners of McLean Gardens, Wisconsin ave, housing development, were at odds yesterday over a plan to continue cafeteria service at the development.

Attorney Roger Whiteford, representing the Fairmac Corporation, Dallas, Tex., new owners of McLean Gardens, asked the zoning body to extend present zoning so that the entire cafeteria would be operating within the law.

The kitchen and serving areas are in legal territory, he explained and a 75-foot extension of the zoning area would include eating tables as well.

The owners' request was supported in "voluntary" petitions by 1102 of the 1350 dormitorly tenants and 468 of 722 persons living in McLean Gardens apartments, he said.

Virginia Morsey and Mrs. Frances Adams testified for the tenants and Mrs. Leslie B. Wright spoke in favor of the plan for the Federation of Citizens Associations. Whiteford said the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations and the Forest Hills Citizens Association also favor the plan.

Assistant Executive Officer Don Dudley, representing Comptroller General Lindsay Warren, said the cafeteria was needed by Government Accounting Office employes in temporary buildings in the area. E. Banks Thomas, chief of the GAO claims division, testified 1300 persons from his division eat daily at the cafeteria.

Guilty Plea Is Entered In 'Fix' Case

Kermit Mallette, 44, of 928 Barry st. nw., yesterday pleaded guilty in District Court of an attempt to bribe a policeman to "fix" a numbers charge. He will be sentenced later.

Mallette was charged with phoning Police Pvt. A. E. Sweeney of the Twelfth Precinct in an attempt to secure the return of number slips taken as evidence when two friends were arrested.

Sweeney asked him to call back. The policeman then told Capt. Walter Storm, his commanding officer, of the incident and the latter instructed Sweeney to meet Mallette as part of a trap.

The rendezvous was arranged. As Mallette handed over $50 of a promised $200 bribe, Sweeney signaled fellow policemen who placed Mallette under arrest.

Oldtime Senate Chairs, Drapes, Rugs, Clocks Bring Total of $2595 at Auction in Capitol

The Washington Post

ANCIENT TIMEPIECES—Clocks that have ticked away years of legislative history are examined by prospective bidders at the Senate's first auction in 14 years in the basement of the Capitol yesterday

Old Senate furnishings went on the auction block at the Capitol yesterday, and grossed $2595.50 in three hours and 10 minutes of fast bidding.

Four hundred persons jammed the basement corridors under the west side of the Capitol to buy and watch the selling of chairs, drapes, rugs, clocks and other one-time stage-settings of America's top political work-shop.

Clocks went at $3 to $37.50. One prize was the mantel clock decorated with minute Corinthian columns long a feature of the Senate Appropriation Committee rooms. It was bought for $27.50 by Mrs. Vera Rudolph, who works in the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Friends saw Everard H. Smith, clerk of the Senate Appropriations committee, brush at his eyes as the clock was sold.

T. Roosevelt Arm Chair

Biggest single sale was the $125 purchase of an ornate arm chair, reported to have been used by Theodore Roosevelt when he was president of the Senate. It was bought by U. G. Lewellen, administrative assistant to Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.). He said he would move it first to his office, and later to his home.

The price was a big disappointment to Mrs. George M. Hill, 116 6th st. ne., who said she wanted to give it to her son, George M. Hill, 3d 22, a Navy veteran now a senior at Wilson Teachers College. Her last bid was $75.

Representative Harold F. Youngblood (R., Mich.) bought a chair for $25 which he said was worth $125, and also bought two clocks, one for $7 and one for $11.

Dealer Heavy Buyer

Biggest single buyer was a secondhand dealer from Charlottesville, Va., who bought items mostly chairs, totaling $723. Smallest price was 50 cents for a butter presser, but this was rivaled by three rugs that went for a $1. Largest price for a rug was $36.

This was the first auction of its kind since 1933, with the same auctioneer, Ralph A. Weschler, of the firm Adam A. Weschler and Son, Inc. at 905 E st. nw. The auctioneer's son, William P. Weschler, kept track of the prices, and wound up with a fistful of money two inches thick. "Terms of the sale are positively and strictly cash," his father announced at the outset.

A moment of excitement came when free-lance photographer Jack Miller, of 1024 Vermont ave. nw. crashed through the thin top of a four-drawer filing cabinet, where he was perched to get pictures. He said it didn't hurt.

IN "TEDDY'S" CHAIR?—Michael Lee, 2, of 3147 Westover dr. se., occupies a chair which once was supposed to have been used by President Theodore Roosevelt. The chair was knocked down to Senator Kem (R., Mo.) for $125

Loan for Schools To Be Discussed

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—The Anne Arundel County legislative group will sound out public opinion on a proposed seven million dollar 25-year loan for county school system at a series of meetings next week.

The first of the public sessions will be held at Southern High School, near Mount Zion Tuesday; the second at Annapolis High School Wednesday and the third at Glen Burnie High School Thursday. All will start at 8 p. m. Jenkins pointed out that the proposed bond issue also would enable a cut in the tentative $1.29 tax rate for 1948.

Bus Rider Unit Sends Protest To Gov. Lane

A formal protest charging Maryland Public Service Commission with "lack of cooperation with the bus riding public" has been lodged with Maryland's Governor Lane by the Boulevard Bus Riders Association.

The association, formed early this year to get wartime service restored on local stops between Washington and Baltimore, blamed the commission for delay in a decision.

Professor George D. Quigley of the University of Maryland, president, said the group "does not feel the commission has looked at the problem from the viewpoint of bus riders."

During the war, riders to waypoints between Baltimore and Washington were able to use both Greyhound and Trailways buses. Since 1945, however, Trailways has lacked a local franchise, nd the bus riders' group has asked the commission to renew this franchise.

In Montgomery

Democrats Top GOP in Registering

More Democrats than Republicans are registering as new residents in Montgomery County, Ward Caddington, member of the county's Board of Election Supervisors, revealed yesterday.

He said 520 have registered so far as Democrats and 481 as Republicans. Sixteen have declined to declare a party affiliation.

Deadline for new residents in the county to register to vote in next year's elections is November 1. To date, approximately 48,000 persons are registered. Of this number, Democrats lead Republicans more than two to one, election officials say.

The roving registration boards, which have been sitting in communities throughout the county since October 6, are now sitting from noon to 5 p. m. and 6 to 9 p. m. in the Bethesda County Building and the Silver Spring Armory.

Tomorrow, a board will sit in Barnesville and Friday and Saturday in the firehouse at Glen Echo.

Caddington attributed the "unusually heavy" registration to the fact roving boards have not been sent into the "field" since 1945, and to next year's presidential election.

Biggest crowd thus far encountered was in Takoma Park, where about 550 were registered Monday and Tuesday nights. High interest is evident also in Kensington, where 190 registered last Friday.

Bunch Had Convulsions, Cellmate in Station Says

Suffered Hours, Says Statement; Barrett Questions Credibility Of 'Drunk' Prisoner

John Forrest Bunch, 64-year-old carpenter who died at Gallinger Hospital after being arrested for intoxication, suffered several hours of convulsions before police heeded calls for aid, a cellmate daclared yesterday.

The charge came from Frank Paul Regan, who said he occupied the cell next to Bunch in the Ninth Precinct lockup on July 29, in a signed statement.

Police Chief Robert J. Barrett called a special press conference to deny police mishandling of the stricken man, and questioned the credibility of the author of the statement.

Freed on Drunk Charge

The police superintendent noted that Regan was released on a drunkenness charge Monday, shortly before making the statement, on collateral furnished in part by an attorney interested in the Bunch investigation.

Barrett said Edward J. Lynch, one of the attorneys retained by Mr. Bunch's daughters to investigate his death, "put up $1" toward the $10 drunk charge forfeiture.

He then declared that police had a signed statement from Regan, who said he occupied the cell next to Bunch in the Ninth Precinct lockup taken earlier when "he was sober" in which he denied that Bunch was the victim of mishandling.

Regan, in a signed statement made in the office of Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick and Lynch, who are investigating Mr. Bunch's death, declared the latter was seized by "at least three convulsions," during which he "just flopped around like a rubber ball" while police ignored calls for help.

Regan Statement

Regan said two policemen came to the cell after two hours of such attacks and began arguing. He declared one said, "Damn if I'm going to dress him. I ain't going to do this or that. Finally got in there and got to mauling the man around trying to dress him.

"They cussed him out and said he had no business getting undressed and asked him what he wanted to do that for. There was a lot of cuss words.

"Finally they tried to get him to walk, brought a stretcher back and tried to make him walk to it. He couldn't walk and they had to help him on the stretcher," Regan is quoted as saying.

Regan identified one of the pair as "Andy." A Pvt. Francis V. Andruzzi testified at the coroner's inquest on Mr. Bunch's death that he was on duty in the cell block. A fellow officer at the precinct said Andruzzi was frequently known as "Andy."

Regan, no fixed address, has a police record of 17 arrests on intoxication since 1931, three arrests on disorderly conduct, and one each on violating the District Unemployment Compensation Act, making threats and destroying public property.

When informed of Superintendent Barrett's comment on Regan's sworn statement, neither Fitzpatrick nor Lynch would make any statement.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay said his investigation of the Bunch death was continuing, and that his office was "doing everything possible to investigate every angle."

He noted that Regan had made a statement earlier to the police and was "not a new witness." When asked for permission to see the earlier statement for comparison purposes, he told a reporter of The Washington Post that permission would not be granted, since the paper was not a matter of "public record."

James J. Gorman, jr., who previously investigated the Bunch death for his relatives, said he would "certainly have put Regan on the stand at the inquest" if he had been informed by police that he had occupied the next cell.

District Commissioner John Russell Young issued a written statement after hearing of the Regan charges:

"I have told the public everything I know about the Bunch case. I have no intention of covering up any fact or defending any wrongdoer.

"If Mr. Bunch died as a result of the least maltreatment or neglect, I want to know it. Thus far I have had no information to that effect. So far reports to me do not indicate anything of that sort."

Court Upholds ABC In Evidence Buying

Richmond, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, in effect, today upheld the right of State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board agents to purchase liquor in efforts to obtain evidence when it refused appeals to Ashley Powers, operator of a Dickinson County restaurant.

Powers had been fined a total of $400 and sentenced to 90 days in jail at two trials for selling legal whisky. Evidence at his trials showed the whisky had been purchased by ABC agents who testified against him. Counsel for the defendant insisted it is unlawful for agents of the Commonwealth to induce someone to commit a crime, but the court upheld the conviction as "plainly right."

U. S. Buys Heavily Of Eastern Shore Sweet Potatoes

U. S. Should Reduce Its Debt In Present Boom, Snyder Says

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder yesterday called on this Nation to reduce her debt and strengthen her financial structure during the present business boom.

Speaking at the unveiling of a statue of Albert Gallatin, secretary of the Treasury under President Thomas Jefferson, Snyder declared:

"We of this generation face the problem of a huge natjonal debt rseulting from the extraordinary expenditures of war. We are experiencing an unusual prosperity, which will permit us, if we have the stamina, to reduce that debt and thus strengthen our financial structure.

"If we are to help those people now in desperate trouble who deserve aid and have proved they desoire to help themselves if given the opportunity, we must keep our financial position sound."

Snyder praised Gallatin in that he held the financial integrity of the United States more important than all other issues.

"Gallatin was the first to develop the theory that during times of national peace and prosperity, the Treasury must show ample surpluses to be applied toward an orderly reduction of the public debt," he declared.

"He realized that the Nation must in such times prepare itself to cope with any emergency that might arise. He realized that our permanent economic well-being rests upon fiscal solvency," Snyder said.

Allan Sproul, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and chairman of the Albert Gallatin Memorial Committee, extolled Gallatin as a legislator, diplomat and Cabinet officer.

The statue, erected on the north plaza of the Treasury Building, was unveiled by Gallatin's great-granddaughter, Mrs. Louise Gallatin Gay of Edgartown, Mass. James E. Fraser was the sculptor.

Kennedy Urges D. C. to Revise Weights Law

The District's weights and measures law should be modernized to cover present selling methods, particularly those of frozen foods, J. Thomas Kennedy, superintendent of weights, measures and markets, said yesterday.

Kennedy said he would ask the Commissioners to seek amendments of the law during the next session of Congress. The present law, enacted in 1921, has been amended several times, he admitted, but still lacks sufficient coverage for frozen foods merchandising.

Necessary changes would benefit both packers and customers, he declared. He said he doubted if the former would oppose them.

Weights of some frozen items change after they are packed, he pointed out. Customers should pay for only the weight received, not the weight marked on the package by the packer, he asserted.

Kennedy said he is also investigating complaints that fishermen put unsold fish on ice, then sold them several days later as fresh fish at Municipal Fish Market.

Canned Goods Cheaper

Easton, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—Wholesale prices of canned goods between September 1 and 15 were lower than those fixed by the Government under the OPR, the Tri-State Packer's Association reported today after a survey.

D. C. Contract Match Opens This Afternoon

By Marian H. Barre
Post Reporter

The seventeenth annual tourney for the contract bridge championships of the District of Columbia will open this afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel and continue through Friday, Saturday and Sunday, with two sessions daily.

First trophy in competition is the Columbia Cup for women's pairs, play beginning at 2 p. m., under the direction of Russell J. Baldwin of New York. Mrs. Ira Haygooni and Mrs. W. Marriott, both of Baltimore, are the defending champoins.

A local partnership formed by Mrs. Frederick Eberson and Charles C. Johnson will defend the Capital Cup for mixed pairs in the evening session beginning at 8:15. Final rounds in both games will be held tomorrow at the same hours.

All District events run through two sessions save the men's pair championship, to be played tomorrow concurrently with the women's finals. J. R. MsGhee and William Million won the men's title last year.

The tournament is run under the auspices of the Washington Bridge League, of which Dr. W. H. Gorton is president. Charles C. Johnson and J. J. Parish are joint chairmen of the tournament committee. The American Contract Bridge League will award master points according to its published regulations.

These national awards attract bridge luminaries from all over the country—among the stars who will compete in the District championships are Charles Solomon of Philadelphia, who ranks sixth among 90 life masters; Mrs. Ben Golder, also of Philadelphia, and Mrs. J. E. Folline, Richmond, both life masters, a grade made by only 12 women; Bill Christman of Birmingham, Ala., who rose into prominence in the recent National Tournament; Howard Woolworth of Buffalo, and many others.

Gov. Lane Studies Appeal for Parole

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—Governor Lane said today he had received from F. Murray Benson, director of parole and probation, a report on an appeal for release by Albert S. Sutton, Washington, convicted of murder.

The Governor said he had not had time to study the report, but expected to make a statement tomorrow. Sutton sought release after serving 11 years of a life sentence at a hearing before Benson September 25.

Sutton was sentenced as a result of the gun slaying of Allen B. Wilson in Montgomery County 13 years ago. Wilson was a route agent for the Washington Times-Herald, who, the State contended, stumbled into a trap set for a Washington gambler.

Man Washed 500 Feet in 30-In. Sewer

John Davis, 46, 1417 Corcoran st. nw., a laborer, narrowly escaped death yesterday when he was washed 500 feet through a 30-inch sewer pipe on Ager rd. near Quen's Chapel rd., Brookside Manor, Md.

He was cementing seams inside the pipe when other workmen, engaged in construction of the Northwest Branch trunk sewer for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, struck a 12-inch water main with a power shovel.

The water, pouring into the empty sewer line, swept Davis through the pipe. Fellow workers blocked off the pipe and opened a manhole from which Davis was pulled uninjured. He went back to work after a 2-hour rest.

Homes in the area and Ager Rd. Elementary School were without water for about 5 hours while the break was being repaired. The trunk line is being constructed by the Lee Butler Co. of Silver Spring under contract with the sewer commission.

Judge Recognizes Man Sought in Arson Case

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—Shelley Jones, of Jesterville, was in Wicomico County jail today to await trial on a 10-year-old arson charge, after he was recognized by a judge before whom he was brought on an oyster law violation.

Jones was indicted in 1937 by a grand jury which accused him of burning down a store belonging to M. W. Heath in Jesterville, but Jones left the county after the indictment.

While trying a man who gave his name as George Conway and two brothers, Freeman and Lucius Jones, on charges of having in their possession more small oysters and shells than the law allows, Judge Carl L. Walter of People's Court asserted that "Conway" was actually Shelley Jones, brother of the other two.

The three were fined $100 each and costs, and Shelley was remanded to jail for prosecution on the old charge. No bond has been set.

White House Cancels State Dinner Parties

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE President and Mrs. Truman have directed the cancellation this season of the White House State dinners, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. James Helm, secretary to Mrs. Truman. This, she stated, is because of the urgent necessity for the conservation of food, in order that our country may help to relieve the hunger abroad.

Dinners thus canceled include two diplomatic dinners, the Cabinet dinner, the dinner for the Chief Justice and the Supreme Court, the dinner for the President Pro Tempore of the Senate and the Speaker's dinner.

There will be a full program of receptions, however, for the 1947-1948 season. The diplomatic reception will be held December 2; the judicial reception on December 16; the reception to officials of the various Government departments on January 13; and the Army, Navy and Air Force reception on January 27. The final date will be the Congressional reception on February 10.

No Precedent Broken

It is believed that light refreshments will be served at these functions. If not, however, the situation will not be revolutionary, as no food was served at White House receptions during the Taft, Coolidge, and Hoover Administrations, in days of plenty.

Mrs. Truman faces a heavy schedule of engagements on her return from Independence, Mo., this week.

Saturday at 4 she will receive members of the General Federation of Women's Clus, who are attending the board of directors meeting here. On Monday at 5 o'clock she will hold a reception for members of the Institute on Guidance Problems of boys and girls in rural and industrial areas, and on Tuesday at 2, Mrs. Truman will greet members of the women's clubs of Mount Washington, Baltimore, Md.

Reception Planned

Around Town

Capital Gains Personality From Carolina

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AN INTERESTING new personality around town is Gordon Gray, Assistant Secretary of the Army. Born in Baltimore, he is a graduate of the University of North Carolina. His father is Bowman Gray, an amazing character who has piled up one of those delightful unwieldy fortunes, manufacturing cigarettes.

The younger Gray was a North Carolina State Senator, 1938-42. He rose from private to captain during World War II. He is a favorite with the Shelby "machine" which takes a hand at running State politics and he might be a candidate for Governor should he decide to leave Washington.

Tall, chic Mrs. Gray was Jane Boyden Craige. She's a Vassar gal. Recently her father-in-law built a "palace" so grand that, rumor insists, the doorknobs are solid gold. Bowman Gray's great interest is education and he is planning to move Wake Forest College to the tobacco stronghold of Winston-Salem. There he plans to enlarge it and probably rename the rejuvenated institution after himself.

Princesses' Tutor Here

SPENDING a Washington weekend with Sue Rosenberg is a charming woman, the Vicomtesse de Bellaigue. "Toinon'" de Bellaigue is senior French tutor and companion to British Princess Elizabeth, in charge of her French education.

Belgian-born, both she and her husband are naturalized Britishers and, with their two boys, lived in London. Recently Viscount Pierre de Bellaigue was appointed to the United Nation's secretariat and his wife came over for a brief visit before plunging into Princess Elizabeth's wedding festivities.

Of medium height, with reddish hair, the Vicomtesse is friendly, interested in just about everything. In Washington last fall, she met Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Snyder and their daughter, Drucie. When the Snyders turned up in London last summer, the Vicomtesse gave a cocktail party, followed by dinner and dancing at the Savoy, for Drucie and the two princesses. Later, the Snyders returned the compliment, asked the Vicomtesse as one of the honor guests at their grandest party.

Successful Novelist

RATED A PRODIGY in literary circles is Anne Goodwin Winslow, whose new novel, "A Quiet Neighborhood," has just been published. The author is the widow of Gen. Eveleth Winslow, and was stationed here on and off during his long Army career. She'll return soon to winter with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Randolph Winslow.

Though she published poetry in her youth, Anne Winslow never started serious writing until her children were married. Since 1943 she has authored four books. Two of them—"The Dwelling Place," and "A Winter in Geneva"—have been extremely successful. She works summers only, at her Memphis home, and spends winters in Washington.

Mrs. Randolph Winslow, who's known professionally as Marcella Comes, is a muralist and portrait painter and won the Washington Society of Artists first prize with her portrait of Gretchen Green.

Calling Randolph's Bluff

THE LECTURING season is burgeoning and soon Randolph Churchill will be in our midst. The former Prime Minister's son is a critical guy, last year complained about our cooking methods. In Australia and New Zealand, he complained about the slow turnaround of ships bearing victuals to England.

Now junior Churchill has been offered a proposition by T. Hill, head of New Zealand's Watersiders Union. The "down under" boss has offered Randolph a job right on the docks. Instead of a 40-hour week, Hill assures Randolph, he'll have to work 59 to 63 hours and he'll see for himself there'll be "toil, sweat and maybe tears" among the workers.

Think what good propaganda it would make, how the Churchill value would be enhanced among his feminine admirers if he'd rustle bales and cases for a week or two.

A lieutenant in the Army Nurses' Corps, Miss Jones served in the Philippines, and is now stationed at Brooke General Hosiptal, Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex.

Parties for Engaged Pair

Mrs. Byron and Fiance Are Feted

By Marie McNair

WHEN Katharine Byron was Congresswoman from Maryland, she knew what it was to put in some pretty full days.

But she's never been busier than she is right now, these weeks before she and Samuel Riddick are married on October 25.

Between parties she's trying to call all her friends by telephone for a personal invitation to the event, and the long distance phone rings constantly between here and Williamsport, Md., where the wedding will be held at Springland Farm, the old family estate of her mother, Mrs. Clinton Goodloe Edgar.

Well-wishing friends started entertaining for the engaged pair right after their engagement was announced about a fortnight ago.

The Smith Bowmans and the DeLong Bowmans gave a cocktail party for them last Sunday and Mrs. William Brockman entertained the bride-to-be at luncheon on Tuesday at the Army and Navy Club.

Mrs. Edward Treglown will fete Mrs. Byron at luncheon today and this evening Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller will be hostess at dinner for Mrs. Byron and her fiance. Sunday is the day of Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell's cocktail party and on Monday Mead Patrick's cocktail party and on Wednesday Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim will entertain for them at dinner at Firenze House.

Following the wedding rehearsal next Friday Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph W. Byron, brother-in-law and sister-in-law of the bride-elect, will give a buffet supper for them at their home in Hagerstown, and on the day of the wedding Mr. and Mrs. David Byron of Hagerstown, will entertain at luncheon for the wedding party and members of the family.

ANOTHER OF Washington's dancing institutions is back on the calendar again! It's the Friday Supper Club which will meet for the first time this season tomorrow night at the Sulgrave Club. Originated by Mrs. John R. Williams, a dozen years ago, the Friday Supper Club will give its usual three dances, the next date, November 21 and the last on January 30. Last year, the committee finding itself under the peculiar circumstances of having actually made money, gave the club members a "bonus" dance.

Meyer Davis will come down to play tomorrow night and the committee this year is the same as last. Members are Mrs. Francis Almirall, Mrs. Lauriston Hardin, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Mrs. Charles Whitney Price, Mrs. James J. Wadsworth, Mrs. John F. Wilkins, jr., and Miss Emily C. Davis.

TOWN TOPICS:

Back from England where she visited her son-in-law and daughter, Lord and Lady Monson, Mrs. Alexander Powell is spending two months at Journey's End, her home in Chevy Chase. After that she'll turn over the keys to new tenants and head South. Later in the season Lord and Lady Monson will come over from England and will go to Bermuda, where they're building a house. It was there that Lady Monson and her children waited out war's end.

Betty Williams, who has had her fingers in so many successful "pies" in Washington in the past, is up to something else again.

She's bought a 2000-acre farm at Pine Plains, Duchess County, N. Y., with an old house on it. In its spacious kitchen she is whipping up a very special French dressing, a mayonnaise and two brands of conserve. The label on the jars read "Scattercook Farm."

The widow of a major in the Army, Mrs. Williams is related to the Bolling family of Virginia. Her grandfather founded the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

'Fellow Travelers' Included In DAR Ranks, Editor Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

THE National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, have a few leftist and subversive worries. So revealed Mrs. Grace Brosseau of Greenwich, Conn., new editor of the DAR magazine, at a press conference yesterday held by Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, recently installed president general.

In a discussion of DAR policies and perplexities, Mrs. Brosseau said that the National Society has a few so called liberals or "fellow travelers.'"

"I prefer the Communists to the fellow travelers or so called ultra liberals," declared Mrs. Brosseau. "At least you know where the Communist stands."

Asked if the DAR contained leftists or Communist elements, Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, immediate past president of the society, replied, "We have a few but we try to weed them out."

To date, only one member has been expelled from the DAR for alleged leftist or subversive activities, according to Mrs. Brosseau. The woman is said to have distributed subversive pamphlets.

Mrs. Brosseau went on to explain that it would take a lot to have a member expelled from the DAR.

Mrs. Talmadge picked up the conversation and pointed out that requisite for membership are desirability and eligibility . . . that actually the admission of a candidate depends upon the decision of individual chapters . . . that the candidate must be indorsed by two people to whom she is personally known.

'Lack of Lineage'

Queried if race or color bar a person from membership in the society, Mrs. Talmadge answered "no," and declared that so far only one Negro has been refused admission into the society. The reason, Mrs. Talmadge explained, was "ineligibility because of lack of authentic lineage."

Well known trouble makers, she pointed out, would not be welcome.

Meantime, Mrs. O'Byrne reported that all is quiet on the DAR front on the eve of the national board meeting. But what will pop today when the Daughters meet in Constitution Hall in a closed session, not even Mrs. O'Byrne would hazard a guess.

Mrs. Brosseau revealed that she is streamlining the organization's official publication, bringing it up to date on current subjects. Most of the articles in the next issue, she said, will be authored by men, including J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI.

Membership Drive

One of the main projects of the DAR this year will be a membership drive, reports Mrs. O'Byrne. The goal is about 42,000 to bring the membership up to 200,000.

The president general, who will preside at her first official board meeting today, said that she did not anticipate any controversial subjects when board members and State regents from every State in the Union gather here to map out the year's program. "In accordance with DAR policy," she said, "national defense will be stressed."

Immediately following the two-day board meeting. Mrs. O'Byrne, accompanied by several members of her cabinet, will leave for South Carolina to attend the founders day celebration of Tamassee School, one of the society's approved 14 schools.

Heirloom Laces Trim New Chapeaux

EXQUISITE black chantilly lace from the top of an 1850 parasol fits over the cartwheel crown of this hat, which Edith Burrows calls "Romance." Pale bluish satin forms the body of the hat and deeper pink ribbon streamers flutter down at one side

"GRANDE ELEGANCE" is the name of this sophisticated turban. It's made of black taffeta which is draped upward and swept to one side.

By Peggy Preston

ONE of the most original and captivating hat collections in Washington is currently being shown by Mrs. A. C. Burrows, a Navy wife, who is as good looking as the hats she creates.

Tall, raven-haired Edith Burrows asked friends and members of the press to a preview of her collection in her apartment here this week. On October 23 she will introduce her hats to a similar group in New York at the Sherry Netherlands.

Made of heirloom laces, carved ivories, rare jeweled fabrics and other interesting old materials, all of Mrs. Burrows' hats are collector's items. A beautiful old fan, a true museum piece, is used in one of the hats; in another a fragile lace wedding handkerchief is starched and flattened against a wide, upswept brim.

A dainty, jeweled bird from the Orient perches on a jade stick on top of one of her hats. One of the loveliest is made of a heavily jeweled piece of ivory satin from an ancient Viennese morning coat. There is a handbag to match cut from the same cloth.

Mrs. Burrows has traveled to many interesting lands with her husband, a Navy captain. From each place she lived she brought back little collector's items, many of which are now showing up in her hats.

An artist, she has had considerable success with oil painting and last year tried her hand at designing Christmas cards.

She has been making her own hats for years. But it was not until a short time ago that she decided to take this hobby seriously. As is so often the case, she did so at the suggestion of a friend. "You really ought to make hats professionally," an admirer told her one day. So she did.

Now she finds she is up to her ears in hats, hats, hats, all day long. "But it is fun," she says. "It gives me the chance to combine the two things I like most—fashion and art."

Underwood & Underwood

FROM this heirloom French carriage parasol of 1850, Edith Burrows fashioned the two hats which she models above. Real silk taffeta, fragile black lace and carved ivory handle were all employed in these hats. The fringe will turn up sooner or later in another of her creations

Club Women Asked to Aid Jewish Cause

The Rev. Frank G. Ricker, president, Meadville Conference of Unitarian Churches, has called upon feminine clubdom to support the partition of Palestine in order that the Jewish people might have a homeland.

Guest speaker at Zonta Club's luncheon held yesterday in the Dodge Hotel, he made a strong plea in behalf of the Jewish people's claim to Palestine. "Lift up your voice to create public opinion for the partition of Palestine if a better solution cannot be found," he said. "It would be better, of course, if all of Palestine could be given to the Jewish people."

Miss Marian Parlov, member of the American Christian Palestine Committee, presented the speaker and Mrs. Dorothy Scates, club president, presided.

Your Questions on Homemaking

I have a shortage of coffee cups in the Minton china pattern called "Minton Roses." I have tried unsuccessfully to obtain some in department stores in Washington, and also have written to a china shop in Quebec, Canada. Can you offer any suggestions as to where I might look further, or do you know of anyone who would be interested in selling a few pieces of this pattern. J. E. M.

Take a piece or your china to the Swap Shop, 1669 Wisconsin ave. nw., where, I am told, the piece will be displayed with the information that you wish to obtain coffee cups in that pattern. If there are any customers who have some of the pattern of which they wish to dispose, you may get together in that way.

Is there any method for removing markings which the laundry has put on some of my good towels and sheets? Is it indelible ink, or what? R. W. R.

Since the ink used for the markings on your towels and sheets is the kind designed especially so it cannot be removed, I'm afraid there is nothing you can do. However, the marks usually become lighter with repeated launderings.

Is there anything I can do to remove a musty odor from two pillows filled with goose feathers? The pillows are fairly new and though I have aired them frequently, the odor still remains. J. S.

Since airing the pillows doesn't remove the musty odor, I would suggest transferring the feathers to a bag made of material looser in weave than the pillow ticking and airing the feathers in this way. To transfer them, baste openings of the two bags together so that by shaking, the feathers will fall from one to the other. While the feathers are airing in the more porous bag, wash the ticking to do away with any possibility of odor from that source.

1. What can be done to remove a musty odor from the inside of fleece-lined boots which have been sitting in a damp closet?

2. What can be used to remove rust stains from a linen sampler which has been cross-stitched in black? The rust came from metal hoops which were left on the material a long time. A. F. M.

1. Place boots in open air and sunshine, turning down the tops to expose as much of the lining as possible. Several days of this treatment should remove all odor.

2. To remove the rust, spread stain over a pan of boiling water, sprinkle with salt, and squeeze lemon juice on it. After a few minutes rinse, then repeat process. This method is slow but doesn't harm fabrics. If this doesn't do the job, you might try this: spread sampler over a bowl of hot water and sprinkle oxalic acid crystals on the stain and moisten with hot water. Rinse in hot water and repeat until stain disappears. Be sure to test effect of oxalic acid on the color of the cross-stitching before using this method.

An antique china candy jar was knocked off a table and a piece, broken from the side, also broke into a number of fragments. I have all the pieces and would like the address of some company that is in the business of mending china. I also have a few pieces of glassware that are broken and would like the addresses of companies in the business of mending the same G. A. L.

I'm sorry we cannot recommend specific companies in this column, but if you will look in the classified section of your telephone directory for "China and Glassware—Repairing" you will find a company qualified to repair your pottery and glass pieces.

Because inks differ in composition, it is difficult to recommend a method for removal which will be effective for all inks. However, you might try this: Make a paste of cornstarch, using one part water and one part alcohol for moistening. Work it into the stain and let dry. Brush off. If this lightens it, this method may be repeated as often as the paste shows any ink. If this method isn't successful, bleaching is the only alternative and for this it would be wisest to take the leather to a professional cleaner.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Renouncing Hopeless Love for English Girl, Man Marries to Perpetuate Family Strain, Whereupon English Girl Reopens Flirtation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This problem concerns a friend of ours—I'll call her Iris—a great favorite with young and old. Four years ago she married a fine soldier, straightforward but unimaginative, and we felt she built him up unduly as a great hero.

He returned to civilian life with college studies to finish, and she—although used to a life of ease—learned to cook, sew and count pennies. For months they lived with his parents, a strain of sorts, but she came through it with flying colors.

Now they have two lovely children who have absorbed her completely, inasmuch as her husband has worked long hours into the night the past two winters, during which she was continually alone evenings, waiting for him to get home at 11 p. m. or so.

For years he was in love with an English girl who rejected him, and when he was about to be married he wrote to tell her. She then spoke of changing her mind, which caused him to waver and plunged Iris into sudden grief. She is sensitive and articulate, he isn't good at expressing himself, and we attributed much of the strain to this.

Blunt With Wife, Man's Sorry Now

RECENTLY the English girl made an appearance here and Iris noticed that Herbert became distrait. Then she found a letter he had from the girl, which he hadn't showed her. Iris didn't read the letter but felt a bit shattered, naturally. Later when Herbert was leaving for the summer, on business, Iris asked him where they stood.

He said that as an only child, he'd wanted to give his parents grandchildren, and when he felt his romance with the English girl was over he married Iris. Also he said he'd always understood women want children; and therefore felt that inasmuch as Iris had children, her lot should be a happy one—besides which, his principles were definite and he wasn't the type to have an affair out of wedlock.

After a few months' absence and three casual letters, he wrote Iris that it had "all been a bad dream;" that he was anxious to make a clean slate of things and resume life with her, if her love for him was strong enough to pull him out of all this. Duty seems to be his motive still.

He is 33; Iris is a bit younger. Would a little independence on her part be salutary at this time? Should she tell this immature fellow that he is still free to choose? Or should she take him back and go on with a "compromise" relationship? Please state your opinions. S. P.

Man's Beginning To See the Light

DEAR S. P.: It strikes me that Herbert is beginning to come to his senses at long last as regards the treacherous narcissistic character of the English girl, who walked on his heart when he was available and has been trying to louse up his marriage to Iris from the hour she first got wind of it.

Whether by rendezvous or correspondence, likely he's had some exchange with the girl—let's call her Daphne—during the summer. Consequently, he would have seen her in new perspective, from an essentially different viewpoint than ever before,—the difference being his digested knowledge of Iris' really lovable qualities.

This would give him insight into Daphne's malicious traits, that he didn't possess as a madly infatuated lad. Thus I suggest that Iris, by being simply herself in four years' devoted wifehood, has weakened, indeed I daresay virtually routed, the spell that Daphne cast on him and thought she could renew at will.

Foolish of Wife To Act Upstage

IT IS my deduction that Herbert is speaking from the heart—not in token obedience to duty—when he writes Iris that his romantic bias for the other woman has all been a bad dream. I believe that on seeing Daphne with maturing discernment, he now urgently recognizes Iris' salvationary value to him and fervently hopes she will stand by, in love and fealty, until he can bring his whole life into line with this discovery.

Hence it seems to me Iris would be foolishly rejecting answer to prayer if she were to react in an upstage manner to his appeal for her forgiveness and help. What do Daphne and the late crisis matter, if the marriage is entering safe harbor? M. H.

TOMORROW: Mother worries about her son 20, whose intense courtship if older girl keeps him thin and weary; how can she break it up?

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

For Men Only

Weighing In for Dad's Diet Bout

By Lucia Brown

"BUT you don't need to reduce! You look grand just as you are."

Sounds good, doesn't it? Such sweet talk is easy on the ears, particularly when the eyes are resting hungrily on a thick slice of chocolate cake.

If the boys in the office—or the waitresses in his favorite restaurant—feed him that kind of line, he has a hard time not feeding himself extra calories!

Chances are he does look grand—for a fat man. But he'll look a lot grander, and feel that way, too, when he gets his weight down to normal and keeps it that way.

In figuring out what normal is, don't let him be deluded by those "Tables of Average Heights and Weights for Men of All Ages." Remember they're the average, not the ideal.

For the "after thirties," those averages run heavier than normal, as a number of gigantic gents are included in the totals. The average weight for his height at age 30, however, can usually be taken as the ideal for him to stick to the rest of his life.

Or else he can figure his ideal poundage with this trick formula: Count the number of inches he towers above 5 feet. Suppose that's 8 inches. Then multiply this number by 5.5 and add 110, like this:

44+110=154, his ideal weight in pounds.

Of course, he's allowed a small handicap—10 per cent in fact. If his weight varies that much above or that much below the ideal figure, he needn't worry. But if it keeps hanging around way up above that 10 per cent differential—father, beware!

Color Returns to Smart Shoes

Color in shoes has returned this fall for the first time in many seasons.

The men who make the leather and the stylists who create shoes have emptied the horn of plenty for color enthusiasts. Mocha, beige, and gray suede are shown in pumps and sandals. Evening slippers are cocoa, bright cherry red, bronze and there are a few multi-colored brocades.

Gold predominates for formal evening shoes. There are black and brown combinations, with gold or silver trimmings, all-gold sandals, and some even with gold on the inside.

The trend is away from exaggerated clogs to a new daintiness. The effect of lady-like delicacy is achieved with leather-soled platforms in a gold sling sandal with open toe and criss-crossed vamp and in a closed toe pump in black with two gold straps across the instep.

Fear of Noises Soon Outgrown When Child Starts Own Hubbub

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It has been demonstrated by experiments with the newborn that every child has an instinctive fear of noise and will cry when subjected to it. It isn't difficult to see that if other acts or objects are associated with noise when the child is young and impressionable, he will transfer his fears to those acts or those objects.

Mrs. A. J. wonders what causes her daughter to be afraid of noise. She writes, "My little girl is 2½ years old. She is afraid of every sound. She was 8-months-old when we got our vacuum cleaner and she cried so hard that I had to take her to my mother's while I did the cleaning. It was the same with the electric sewing machine.

"Last week when I took her along to the clinic with the baby she was frightened when the nurse pulled down the shade and shook out the oil cloth cover for the table. She wouldn't go on the scales because of this, though she always has.

"We have tried to take her on children's amusement rides at the park, but she is frightened. She cried when the photographer snapped the shutter on his camera. Why is she this way?"

She may have a more acute sense of hearing than some children. She may have been frightened at the doctors some time in the past and now each visit recalls her early fright and she reacts against being there. Many children are fearful of new situations. This may not be the noise there any more than it is the strangeness.

Make it a point not to mention to her, or to others, that she is fearful of noises. You admit that she is no longer afraid of the vacuum or the machine, so give her an opportunity to outgrow these other fears. If you make fear-of-noise a significant part of her personality, you compel her to retain it.

Make an effort when she is to go to some new place to literally draw a picture of it, including all the possible noises she will hear. Encourage her to imitate noises, or to make loud ones with toys. To play at being thunder, or a fast train or an airplane is calculated to extract all fear from the noises they make. She can't help recognizing when she makes a loud noise herself that it is without harm to anyone.

To Paint Better

If you have a new paint brush be sure not to dip it into the paint before you have struck it against the palm of your hand two or three times to remove every particle of dust.

If you find a square, or Greek, cross worked into the design of your Oriental rug, you will know that the rug was not woven by an orthodox Moslem.

2 Apartment Projects Clear Zone Hurdle

Two large apartment projects, one for 13 million dollars and the other for $1,500,000 were among 11 rezoning applications granted yesterday by Prince Georges County Commissioners at zoning hearings in the County Service biulding at Hyattsville.

The 13 million dollar project will include a theater and shopping center on a 74-acre tract near Cherry Hill and Powder Mill rds., near Beltsville, as well as two- and three-story garden type apartments to house employes of the Naval Research Laboratory at White Oak and other nearby Federal offices. The rezoning was asked by R. E. Latimer Land Co. of Washington.

The $1,500,000 project will be a 200-unit apartment house on a 15-acre tract on Southern ave. near Wheeler rd. at Oxon Hill, for which residential C rezoning had been asked by Alfred L. Thomas.

Promise Is Cited

Daniel M. Greene, spokesman for the Queens Chapel Citizens' Association, protested an apartment rezoning for a five-acre tract on the north side of Queens Chapel rd., opposite the Jueens Chapel Manor Apartments in Mt. Rainier. Greene contended enough apartment zoning had been granted in the neighborhood and that Vernon D. Hedin, owner of the property, had promised residents of Avondale, an adjoining subdivision, that no apartments would be located there. The commissioners rejected the application.

The commissioners also rejected the request of Andrew J. Heffron for apartment zoning for two lots on H st. near 49th ave., Capitol Heights, after the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission objected it would be "spot zoning."

Petitions Approved

Charles A. Parks and Joseph P. Lopienski, from residential A to commercial D of eight lots at the Southwest corner of the George N. Palmer Highway at Cleveland st., East Columbia Park.

David L. and Paul P. Merkle, from residential to commercial of four lots at the northwest corner of George N. Palmer Highway and Cleveland st.

L. O. Misner, from residential to commercial of 7.028 acres on the west side of Defense Highway, near Cross st., West Lanham.

Eloise P. Claflin, from residential to commercial of two lots at College and Yale aves., College Park.

Mrs. William E. King, permission to operate a day nursery at 5714 64th ave., Eastpines.

Wade H. Sheriff and Alice B. Sheriff, permit to operate a public garage and gasoline filling station on two lots on Defense Highway, Decatur Heights.

William Brainin, permit to operate a gasoline filling station on the northwest side of New Hampshire ave. near the District Line.

Alex E. Portis, permit to use property at 4815 Froelich lane, Hyattsville, as a construction equipment storage yard.

The commissioners disapproved the request of Leavon Abrams for a permit to operate a tourist camp on four lots on the north side of Baltimore blvd., Autoville, Berwyn.

Board Denies Advocating Cheap Material

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday officially denied it has advocated use of "cheap" building materials in county school buildings.

The denial resulted from a statement, attributed by a newspaper to School Supt. W. T. Woodson, to the effect the board favored use of cheap materials to offset rising construction costs. Woodson has emphatically denied making the statement.

County Executive Secretary R. M. Loughborough said the supervisors "wanted to clarify the issue in the eyes of the public." He said the board is without authority to determine the type of materials used.

Md. State Police Official Suspended

Pikesville, Md., Oct. 15 (AP).—State police headquarters announced today that Capt. Ruxton Ridgely, supervisor of traffic and training, had been suspended for 30 days, without pay.

Col. Beverly Ober, superintendent of State police, said Captain Ridgely was suspended yesterday for "violation of my personal orders" and those of the executive branch of the department. Colonel Ober added: "I followed the law. I don't care to comment further."

Captain Ridgely, at one time field commander of the State police, recently had been placed in charge of the department's recruiting campaign.

Five classes are listed: green hunters, horses that have not hunted more than one season; half-bred hunters; thoroughbred hunters: Corinthian class, horses to be owned and ridden by a member of a recognized hunt, and must have been hunted at least six times during the 1946-47 season; and hunt teams, to be ridden by members or hunt servants in full hunting attire.

Va. Sailor Killed When Car Hits Pole

Victoria, Va., Oct. 15 (AP).—William C. Booth, 18, of Blackstone, a sailor stationed in Illinois, was killed at 2:45 a. m. today when the truck he was driving crashed into an electric pole on the highway near Chase City.

Police Chief E. L. Slayton said the crash disrupted electric service here and in Kenbridge, Chase City, Crewe and Farmville.

Jordan Again Escapes Trial For Murder

George T. Jordan, 28, yesterday escaped trial for first-degree murder for the second time in three years when he was adjudged of unsound mind by a jury at a District Court lunacy hearing and ordered committed to St. Elizabeths.

Jordan was arrested in May, 1944, and charged with slaying Alexis Kulikoff during a holdup of the latter's grocery store at 27 3d st. ne.

Before being brought to trial, he was found of unsound mind in October, 1945, and committed to St. Elizabeths.

Early this year, he was found to have regained his sanity and committed to District Jail to serve out a 4-12-year term for a previous holdup.

Shouse Sees Dewey As Victor in 1948

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Jouett Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, predicted today that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York will be elected President in 1948.

Shouse, Democratic chairman from 1929 to 1932, said in an address before the 31st convention of the National Association of Taxicab Owners, that "as a Democrat, I say very frankly that in my opinion the chances are strongly in favor of a Republican President . . . In my opinion, the nominee and next President will be Governor Dewey of New York.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

In Which Bill Gets a Call From Mr. Dillon

The Washington Post operator rang my phone the moment I stepped into the office. (How she invariably discovers that I've arrived, is more than I can fathom).

"Mr. Gold," she said sternly, you're to call Mr. Dillon at Georgia 1652 right away. He's been trying to get you."

So I called Georgia 1652 and a child's voice answered.

"Is Mr. Dillon there?" I asked.

"Yes, he is."

"May I speak to him please?"

"This is Mr. Dillon."

"Oh, it is? This is Bill Gold at The Washington Post. Did you call me?"

"Yes. You asked in your column which piece of fire fighting apparatus couldn't use Pennsylvania ave., and I just wanted to tell you that it's the Fireboat."

"Thank you, Mr. Dillon. How old are you?"

"I'm 8 years old and you can call me Martin. That's my first name."

Martin lives at 900 Longfellow st. nw. Among the older readers, the first correct answers came from George E. Sammond of 3321 Blaine st. ne., Joe Abramson of 4358 N. Pershing dr., Arlington, Va., Florence M. Goodman of 5623 1st st. nw., J. Morris of Arlington Va., and Jack McElveney of the Senate Office Building.

In the next mail, more District Liners joined the parade, among them Jack Bratton of 3302 East Capitol st., Judy Deckelbaum of 1326 4th st. sw., Mrs. J. V. Shipton of 201 Avenue C, District Heights, Md., F. R. Gale of 2310 20th st. nw., Lois F. White of Leonardtown, Md., and Allan Turner of 922 7th st. sw.

Allan, incidentally, points out that while the fireboat can't use Pennsylvania ave, it can squirt a pretty fair stream into that thoroughfare. (At 17th st. se., near the Sousa Bridge.)

Some of the District Liners, as usual, gave me a hearty guffaw with their answers. Jimmie Doughty of 519 69th pl., Seat Pleasant, Md., quips:

"Just because my head comes to a point is no assurance that I'm sharp, but I think the fireboat is the correct answer."

Pat Murphy of 1405 N. Roosevelt, Falls Church, Va., writes: "Tell the man that the answer is the fireboat—and ask him if he has any tough ones."

P. L. K. replies from New York on the stationery of the Hotel Ten Park Avenue, and says: ". . . Fireboat, of course. I'll be back at 3600 38th st. nw. by the end of the week to get what's coming to me." (Hmmmmm.)

A. J. Tufts of 5510 Charlcote rd., Bethesda, Md., warns: "Don't say 'can't use' Pennsylvania ave. If we ever have a big flood this piece of fire-fighting apparatus will float right up the Avenue to your paper and squirt water right in your eye."

Oh, yeah? The day the water gets up that high I won't come to work.

Among those who didn't get the answer we can list the Fire Department and Hazel McGrath of 2501 Q st. nw.

Hazel called the fire laddies and put the question to them —and they solemnly assured her that every piece of equipment they own COULD use Pennsylvania ave.

This I want to see.

OUCH!

A local Chrysler dealer was bemoaning the fact that he couldn't get a good handy man for his place.

"They don't seem to want to work," he explained. "The guy we just fired was so bad we used to call him 'fluid drive.'"

"Why 'fluid drive,'" I asked innocently.

"Because he was so shiftless."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two 6-week-old kittens." (MEtropolitan 5318.)

THANK YOU, MR. GNASH

Gretchen Hood of 1226 Fairmont st. nw. passes along a poem written some time ago by her friend Walter Nash, well known local organist and Virginia farmer.

I've never seen the absurdity of our English spelling more entertainingly demonstrated:

A young lady who sings in our choir
Has hair that's the color of phoir.
But her charm is unique
She has such a fair chique
It is really a joy to be nhior.

Whenever she looks down the aisle
She gives me a wonderful smaisle,
And of all of her beaux
I am certain she sheaux
She loves me the best of all the whaisle.

Some day, ere she grows too antique
In marriage her hand I will sique.
If she's not a coquette
(Which I'd greatly regruette)
She shall share my six dollars a wique.

EXPLANATION

To those of you who asked where you could view the newsreel pictures taken Tuesday at the Kann fire:

In all probability, you can't. The newsreel boys tell me they shoot fires like this one for "protection" in the event the story later takes a more sensational turn.

If for some reason a shot of the fire is ever needed, the newsreel companies can dig it out of their files. But they know when they take the pictures that it's a hundred to one they'll never use them.

Kermit Drives a Tough Bargain

NEW YORK.—Kermit Bloomgarden, producer of the new hit, "Command Decision," has produced only five plays. His other hits were "Deep Are the Roots" and "Another Part of the Forest." Three out of five is a remarkable record, but Bloomgarden was well-schooled in show business. He served as business manager for the Group Theater and for Herman Shumlin.

He learned the angles so well that when Philip Loeb, representing actors who were to appear in a Group production, went into Bloomgarden's office to negotiate for their salary scale, he emerged with the announcement, "Well, boys, that's that"—and without his pants.

At the Friars' Club Friday night the veteran vaudevillians were discussing the distant places they've trouped and the degrees of hospitality accorded the traveling entertainers in foreign lands. One of them told of Lydia Hall, a dancer, who was booked to entertain before the Sultan of Johore. The members of the country club set there were aloof to the dancer and never invited her to any of the club activities during her stay.

The Sultan of Johore heard of this and decided to teach them a lesson. He waited until nightfall, then ordered that his gardeners, assisted by a sufficient number of workers, immediately start transplanting 18 thick trees, so that by morning those trees would be deeply implanted on the 18 greens of the golf course.

The late Morris Gest and his father-in-law, David Belasco, were exponents of the school of realism in the theater. But to their friends—who'd see Belasco with his turned-around collar and Gest with his black hat and silk-ribbon tie—it was difficult to determine whether their theater was a reflection of life, or their lives a reflection of their theater.

Just before the war began, Gest learned that his mother was ill in Germany and refused to leave her native country. He told this to Elisabeth Bergner, and the actress advised him: "Get her out. Better that she should die on a railroad train than live in Germany" . . . Gest stared at the actress. "We're talking of my mother," said Gest —"not a movie."

Charles Denny, who resigned as FCC chairman to become counsel to NBC, tipped it by abstaining in cases involving NBC.

Clifford Odets, who obtained his release from his Hollywood contract, will return to Broadway next season in a play which he now is completing. He's discussing every angle of it, via the mails, with Harold Clurman, the director who first discovered him.

Clurman, incidentally, has read thousands of play scripts during his long years in the theater. He says that the most intriguing opening he ever saw in a play synopsis read: "Scene 1: Setting, a primeval forest . . . Time: 10,000 years before the Roman Dynasty . . . Scene 2: Six days later."
